AN: Hey there all you readers. Those Days is a huge success, and I'm feeling good about NoL: BV, I've decided to make another story. I haven't gotten that bad of a review yet, so I'm hoping this story will also be something enjoyable for all of you guys.

Will this be an AU universe? Yes. Will shipping's change? Possibly.

Chapter 1: Ruby

"And that class is how to get the integral of the function." The professor concluded to the class as the bell had rung. "Remember to read up on revolutions and areas."

Ruby Rose trudged out of the class on her lonesome while a few stuck around to chat with friends. Being a prodigy and skipping two years into freshman high school, she had no one to call a friend through her first two months. Sure her sister was in the same school, but she was a year higher and didn't see her as much during school time.

_'__Maybe I'll head over to the library to read some manga.'_ She thought to herself, pushing away the thoughts of loneliness. As she was entered the library, she took notice of a few girls and a guy in a corner muttering something to themselves. Seeing they had a candle lit, she went over to tell them off.

"H-hey!" She mentally kicked herself for that weak shout. As the girls looked to her, she cleared her throat to continue. "It's dangerous to have a candle in here. You guys should maybe do that somewhere else."

"Sorry." One of them said in a sultry tone. The young girl took notice of her eyes. They were amber and looked fiery, but at the same time felt so cold. "This place is one of the only areas where we can feel the aura flowing freely. Must be because of how quiet it is in here."

"Okay." Ruby mumbled, not understanding what she was a talking about. "But it's still pretty dangerous to have a fire close to books. Big or small."

"â€¦Thanks for the concern." The girl said, extending a hand out. "My name is Cinder. Cinder Fall."

"I'm Ruby Rose." She replied, shaking the older girl's hand.

"You don't have to worry about the candles Ruby." She said in the same sultry tone. For some reason, Ruby felt like listening to what she was saying. As her lilac eyes left the amber ones, she felt a bit light headed. "Go on with your business. We'll be perfectly fine once we're done."

Nodding her head, Ruby had picked a table close by to them after she had picked a manga out from her favorite section. She could hear the group muttering something around the small flame, but she took no mind to it. After a few minutes, her nose started to itch and she felt a sneeze coming.

ACHOO!

The sound had echoed through the hall library and had halted the small group in what they were doing. Taking note that the muttering had stopped, the young girl had looked up to see Cinder staring at her with half-lidded eyes.

"Sorry." She apologized, wiping her nose.

"â€¦Maybe you should go to another area." Cinder said, sounding a little peeved.

Getting up, Ruby had moved to the manga section to be closer to the books. After half an hour, she had dozed off feeling tired for some reason.

After waking up, she saw she was the only person in the library. Taking her phone out, she saw that it was a quarter to three. Getting up to stretch, Ruby had clasped both hands in front of her and heard some of her joints pop. Still half asleep, she looked down to see the stack of manga still on the floor.

Picking the stack up, she started putting them back in their place.

Things were going easy as she had one arm hold the stack, while two hands were putting them away. â€¦Wait.

Looking at the arm holding the stack, Ruby then looked at the normal hand that was frozen in place. The other hand, which was all black and a little furry was still putting books back in it's place.

Feeling itself being stared at, the other hand had paused and had turned to Ruby and waved before continuing it's earlier task.

"Aâ€¦aâ€¦aâ€¦" After the stacks were put away, Ruby had followed the source of the hand to see it was coming out of her belly button. "AAAAAAAAAAAAH!"

Luckily the library was empty enough for her to scream without being reprimanded. As she ran around screaming while trying to get away form the arm that was attached to her, the little girl had tripped and landed on her nose.

"How did this happen?" She sobbed while the new arm had patted her in comfort. Her grief was shortly lived as panic set in.

"Is anyone in here?" A tall girl with a black bow asked, opening the door to the library. Seeing no one after a few minutes, she shrugged off her curiosity and left.

"That was close." Ruby whispered under a table. Looking over to the arm, she tucked it under her shirt. It was hard to walk to her locker since the arm had kept wriggling. "Hey! Watch the hand buster! I'm still underage!"

After getting to her locker without suspicion, she had put on heavy sets of clothing she had stored inside in case of wardrobe malfunctions.

_'__Note to self.' _She thought. _'Thank Yang later after all this is through. Now to just walk on home without looking like a creep.'_

Sadly, Ruby had still caught a few people's eyes with how heavy she was looking. She was able to play it off as a puppy she was trying to sneak into her home when people stared too long.

>Yang and Ruby's apartment

Ruby had forgotten the biggest obstacle in her way as she made it home.

Her sister: Yang Xia Long. Technically they were half-sisters, but they didn't really care. Sure Ruby's mom and Yang's mom were at each others throats half the time whenever they all got together, but the sisters had loved each other all the same.

With all the friction, their dad had decided to give the two an apartment to get away from all the fighting when Yang had turned seventeen and got a part-time job as a courier.

It also helped that Tifania, a long time friend of Summer, was happy to act as a guardian for the two while living right next to them.

But back to the matter at hand, Ruby was currently trying to get away from her older sister.

"I'm fine!" She said in a huff.

"Are you sure you're okay Rubes?" Yang asked her sister, not used to seeing the little freshman wearing heavy sets of clothes. "You're looking a little â€¦bloated."

"Uhâ€¦ yup!" Ruby said, shifting her hands around her belly as she felt it squirm. "Eep! â€¦Nothing to hide!"

"â€¦Okay Ruby, what animal did you find this time?" Yang demanded answers, tapping a foot on the floor. They already had Zwei, and he was enough of an expense.

"It's not something I can show you easily!" She whined, trying her hardest to hold what was under her clothes.

"Try me." Ruby sighed as she let go of her belly and lifted her shirt.

Suddenly a huge black furry arm plopped on the floor and started feeling around it surroundings. As Yang followed the arm, she was surprised to see that it was crawling out of her little sister's navel.

"WHAT THE FUCK IS THAT?!" Yang shouted as she tried to stomp on the arm.

Yang was currently taking ballet and kickboxing with Tifania during her down time, but panic was still on her mind as she tried to ungracefully stomp over the arm that kept dodging her every move.

"Yang! Stop!" Her little sister shouted, trying to grab hold of her sister and the arm.

But she was too late as Yang had caught onto the arm and had pulled with all her might. After the mighty tug, Ruby had felt something slide out of her navel as she landed on her butt. Looking up, she saw her sister holding an arm to some sort of giant werewolf.

As the wolf snarled at her sister, Ruby panicked and had dropped a shelf nearby onto the creature. It was successful in knocking the creature out cold.

"What is this thing?" Yang said, prodding the wolf's head.

"I think it's a werewolf." Ruby muttered, holding a vase in case it woke up again.

"I'm calling animal control." Her older sister said, pulling her cell phone out.

"What are you going to tell them?" Ruby said in disbelief. "Hey sorry to call you guys, but I pulled a werewolf out of my sister's belly button. Think you guys can send it into a nice home?"

"Well how'd it even get in there?" Yang growled at her sister. "You were hanging with the cultists again weren't you?"

"I wasn't!" She said indignant. "â€¦At least I think I wasn't."

While they argued, they forgot about the werewolf that was stirring awake. As it got up, with a deep snarl it lunged after Yang.

Seeing the creature about to swipe at her sister, Ruby had pushed her out of the way but had gotten a deep gash in her midsection.

"RUBY!" Yang screamed as she watched blood spray from her sister's gut. But instead of falling to the floor as it should, it had wrapped itself around her baby sister.

The werewolf was confused as well. As it tried to take another swipe at Ruby, a tendril had pulled it right back into Ruby's gut.

"What is going on?" Yang said in fear and shock.

>In Ruby's mind

Ruby was currently in a rose garden with the only light coming from the roses below her feet. Soon, the werewolf had appeared and was stalking towards her. As she backed up, something had caught between her feet and made her fall on her rump.

 "*Take the coil." A voice muttered behind her. Turning around, she saw no one.

"Take the coil. It will MAKE us complete." The voice groaned below her. Turning down, she saw a red cloak flowing towards her.

"Put me ON." She heard the cloak groan. Before she knew what was happening, the cloak had wrapped itself around her neck like a snake coiling around it's prey. After a few seconds, the red cloak was now flowing around her neck.

If Ruby had a mirror, she would have noticed her once lilac eyes were now shining silver instead.

"Yesssssâ€¦" It hissed in glee, sounding more lively. "We are now one!"

Remembering the werewolf in front of her, Ruby had closed her eyes seeing it lunging at her. But instead of being eaten like she thought, the cloak around her had grabbed the monster and was holding it in the air while laughing.

"YES!" It's shout echoed through the void of Ruby's mind. "YES! Oh the power I have now!"

Slamming the creature on the ground a few times before ripping it in half, Ruby had fainted once more at all the gore she was seeing.

>Ruby's room

As Ruby opened her eyes, she saw Yang sitting right by her bedside.

"It was all a dream." She whispered in relief.

" 'Fraid not sweety." A voice said on the floor.

Looking down, she saw a corgi looking at her. Rubbing her eyes, she had chalked it up to her still hallucinating.

"Zwei?" She said to herself. Nudging her sister , she was successful in waking her before pointing back to the canine.

"Ruby?" Her older sister said. Suddenly, Ruby was in a bone crushing bear hug. "Ruby! You're alive."

"Yesterday wasn't a dream?" She asked her sister, still eyeing the dog.

"I wish." The blonde said with a few tears. "But it doesn't matter now. You're okay, and that arm thing is gone now."

"But what happened?" She asked confused. "All I remember is blacking out and roses."

"You two should be thanking me." The two had snapped their heads as they heard the corgi talking. Seeing them staring at him strangely, the canine had spoke once more. "What?"

After a few minutes of screaming, chasing Zwei, and tying him up, the two were now interrogating their dog.

"Who are you and what have you done to Zwei?" Yang growled, pointing a finger at the corgi's nose. The dog had licked it cutely in response.

"Is that any way to thank me from saving you two from that beast yesterday?" It said condescendingly. "I even put you two in bed."

"Don't play me demon!" Yang growled. "I know kickboxing."

"Demon?" It laughed. "I know we bring misfortune, but does that really make us demons? I'd call us more of Grimm."

"You keep saying last night, but all we remember was the werewolf trying to kill us." Ruby piped in, staring into the eyes of her dog.

"It's called a Beowulf actually." The corgi corrected her. "But you really don't remember me, Ruby?"

Shaking her head, the corgi had sighed.

"Maybe this form will help." After hacking and coughing to the disgust of the two, Zwei had thrown up a red cloak. As the corgi barked as if nothing happened, the cloak had rose up a bit. "Recognize me now?"

"You're the cloak in that dream I had." The little sister said, remembering the events.

"And you're the portal from the other side that let me and that Beowulf through." The cloak said, trying to wrap itself around her.

"What do you mean portal?" Yang said face to fabric as she pulled it off her baby sister.

"Sadly for Ruby, she is now the portal between my world and this world." The cloak explained. "Some are nice like me, but there are other things that are malicious and bloodthirsty. Like the Beowulf you pulled out of her."

"Problem solved then." Yang said as if the answer was that simple. "We just make sure Ruby doesn't pull anything out of her gut."

"Not as easy as you think blondy." The red fabric said. "See, that Beowulf came out of her belly. I on the other hand â€¦came out from a cut on her belly."

"So I'll make sure I won't get cut's or anything like that." Ruby waved it off.

"You girls just don't get it do you?" It said tiredly, before turning to Ruby. "You're the portal to the other world. It could be through anything on you: From your hair to the smallest pores. There's no stopping them from coming through."

"So I'm going through monster puberty?" Ruby asked in fear, starting to sweat.

"Basically, yes." That answer did not bode well with her. "While "

"Maybe I can suck them back in me." Ruby suggested. "â€¦Wait. But wont that mean I'll die if everything on me is a portal?"

"The portal is a one way street." Ruby did not get what that meant, and the cloak could see it. "It means things can come out of you, but nothing can go back in. I had to eat the Beowulf last night to save you two."

"Great." She muttered. Yang was sitting at the kitchen table massaging a migraine that was forming.

"But hey." The cloak said, wrapping around her. "I like you, so with me around, you'll have no problems with whatever comes through. After all â€¦we are now one."

Puberty had just gotten stranger for Ruby Rose.

End

>AN: And that's the end of the Chapter 1. If you guys are wondering what kind of voice to use for Ruby's red cloak, then I've been debating with Mark Hamil or Senketsu from Kill la Kill.

Anyways~3.

Next time on Ruby-Chan!

"We have a new student joining us today."

"I don't want to be here!"

"I can't fight her alone like this Ruby! Think of a weapon!"

"Why can't we be friends?"

"Do you even have a name?"

Chapter 2: The Ice Queen

It had been a few days after Ruby and Yang got used to the idea of monsters popping out of her. One thing they found out is that the dangerous portals opened during moments of extreme negative emotions Ruby felt.

Some of the emotions she and Yang had noted were nervousness, fear, anger, sadness, and jealousy.

Other things they noticed were mutations to Ruby and her belongings during extreme positive emotions and other states hygiene wise. One such incident had almost caused Yang to be digested by her room when she went to collect laundry. But that was to be told for another time.

Ruby was now sitting on her bed with the talking cloak laid across from her.

"Soâ€¦" Ruby broke the silence, staring at the fabric.

"So what?" It said back. Having it around had been handy for Ruby after she got over her shock. It was sentient, but it was also helpful to her.

"Do you even have a name?" She asked, looking it over and tilting her head.

"You tell me." It muttered, shuffling a bit. "I came out of you, so be a good host and think something up for me. â€¦Just make it something cool and amazing."

"Okay." She said, putting on a thinking pose. After a minute she had one more important question to ask. "â€¦Are you a boy or a girl?"

"What kind of question is that?!" It shouted, wrapping itself around her and having her slap herself.

"I'm sorry!" She whined, trying to resist. "But how am I gonna give you a proper name if I don't know your gender?"

"Just think f something cool, okay?" It grumbled, letting her go. "If you notice, I don't have any form of reproduction. My kind are a symbiotic bunch that produce asexually."

Choosing to ignore the hard words it was telling her, she gave a name. "How about Raggio?"

"I said cool!" And it was back to the slapping. "Am I some sort of rag draped over your shoulders? Do you wear rags all day? Huh?"

"Okay! You don't like the name!" She little prodigy cried as she tried to get him off. "Why don't you think of a name yourself?"

"â€¦" It had stayed silent for a few seconds. "I cant think of a name either."

"Hypocrite!" Ruby shouted, smacking it with her pillow. "â€¦Maybe Yang could help. She's good with names."

>With Yang

"Raggio." The busty blonde said, not turning from the tv.

"Already said." Ruby said, holding her cloak from strangling her sister.

"Dang." She muttered. "â€¦How bout Crimson."

"I'll take it!" The cloak said in glee. "From now on, I'm Crimson."

"Great." The younger girl said, taking her bag and putting on her uniform. "I'll see you after school, Crimson."

"Woah, hold up!" It said indignantly. "Aren't you going to take me with you?"

"I can't go around wearing you wherever go!" Ruby said with a face. "Everyone will think I'm weird. And the days are extremely hot."

"But I'm your partner!" It whined. "We stick together."

"I'm not walking around like some little red riding hood character." She stood her ground. "I'd be seen even more like a kid in class."

"You're technically still a kid Rubes." Her older sister added. "A teenager, but still a kid."

"Whose side are you on?" She cried out.

"If size is the problem, then no problem!" Not waiting for her reply, Crimson had wrapped itself around Ruby and started shrinking while tying itself around her neck. "Ta-dah!"

As Yang looked over her sister, she was impressed by what Crimson had done. It had shrunk itself into one of those clip-on ribbons that were seen on some of the sailor fukus. It matched with Ruby's dark navy blue school uniform since the colors contrasted.

"Nice job Crimson." Yang gave a thumbs up.

"Meh, you guys got nothing but fashion mags and the TV has nothing good on." After a while, they got used to Crimson's voice. It wasn't so creepy after hearing it a few times. "May as well â€¦spoil myself."

"Well either way," Ruby had groaned, knowing the tone in her sister's voice. "You really 'suit' her well."

"Let's just go Crimson." Ruby grumbled, heading out the door.

"Good morning Ruby!" A busty brunette called out to her from across the hall.

"Hi Aunt T!" She greeted back with a smile. Ruby really loved her Aunt. She wasn't related by blood, but she was a close friend of their dad's and she was super nice.

"I see you've decided to try a new look." Her aunt took notice of Crimson. Somehow, Ruby could feel it preening itself. "The color really suits you."

"Thanks Aunt T." Ruby shuddered mentally, remembering Yang's pun. "You look real happy today."

"I am!" She gushed while putting on a huge grin. "I just received the most wonderful news ever!"

"What's going on?" Whenever her aunt was this happy, it meant a big change.

"I'm not going to say." She said in a hush tone. "It's a surprise."

"â€¦Okay Aunt T." She said, heading off to school. "I'll see you around."

"You take care now." She waved away.

>Streets of Vale

Ruby's good mood was stopped, when she saw her bus leaving without her.

"Wait!" She shouted to no avail. Grumbling at the unfairness, she didn't take notice to someone walking up to her.

"Excuse me?" The person tapped her on the shoulder. Turning around, she saw a blonde guy who looked Yang's age wearing the same uniform as her. "Is this the bus stop to Beacon Academy? I'm new around here."

"Sorry." She mumbled, still sour about being late to the bus. "The bus just left a few seconds ago. The next one comes in thirty minutes."

"That's a shame." He muttered, looking down. "Think we could make it to class if we walked form here?"

"We'd get there." Ruby answered, feeling awkward talking to a guy she's never met. "But we'd probably be late and get a late slip. You'd need a really good excuse to be late. And the bus leaving you doesn't count. It's been used too many times."

"â€¦How about helping the new kid that got lost in the big city?" He offered, extending his arm out for a hand-shake. "I'm Jaune. And you?"

"Ruby Rose." She introduced herself and shaking his hand. "Nice to meet you Jaune."

>A few minutes later

The two had made it to the school gate with three minutes to spare. As it turned out, the city had made few renovations to the streets, so there was a shortcut for people who walked to school. While walking with Jaune, Ruby had found out he was in the same year as her sister and he was from a different town called Arcadia. She got along with easy since they both shared some of the same interests. Ruby could say she had finally made a friend in high school.

As the two entered the gates, Ruby had waved bye to her new friend.

"See you around." Jaune said, going up a floor.

Heading over to her locker, Crimson had taken decided to talk.

"Looks like someone made a friend." It said in a teasing tone.

"So?" She whispered, in case someone was nearby. "It's great that I finally have a friend in high school."

"Good for you." It continued to tease. "Your first friend in high school is your boyfriend."

"Aww come on!" She said in a huff with a small blush. "Can't I have a friend that's a guy who also shares the same interests in the same things as I do?"

"Sure you can." It said meekly. "And they're called boyfriends."

Ruby had smacked her head on her locker. It was official. There were now two Yangs in her life.

"Let's hope class is eventful." She muttered to herself.

In class

"We have a new student joining us today." Professor Oobleck had announced while writing the name of the student on the board. "Please welcome Weiss Schnee to the class."

"Thank you sir." A girl with a side ponytail and white hair stood up. "Nice to meet you everyone."

The whole time class had been going on, Ruby had a feeling that something was up with Weiss. And for some reason, Crimson was tugging on her to get her attention. And for some odd reason ,she could feel herself sweating more than she usually does.

"Ruby."

"What?" She whispered, hunching over so no one could hear her.

"I can feel a portal opening up in you." It whispered back. This had caught her undivided attention.

"Right now?" She was sweating more now as she was panicking.

"Don't worry. It's a low level like me." The ribbon said, trying to calm it's host.

"Cant you eat it like you did the Beowulf?" She asked.

"I can't eat it." She was back to panicking again. "It's a symbiote like me. Eating it would cause a horrible reaction."

"So how do we stop it?" She didn't want a repeat of what happened in her apartment. She felt all her sweat leave her.

"It needs to take form." Crimson explained. "Once it does, I can eat it since it finally has a host."

"When will it come out?" She asked, thinking of a strategy.

"â€¦It's already loose." It said sadly.

"WHAT?" Ruby shouted, forgetting she was in class.

"Yes, I know Ms. Rose." Mr. Oobleck said in a sad tone. "This side of history is most shocking even to me."

Sitting back down in embarrassment, Ruby took note that half the class was laughing at her. Weiss had looked at her with a sour face before shaking her head and turning back to the lesson.

As the lesson ended, Ruby had packed her notes to head over to the chemistry labs. On her way she saw Yang laughing while talking to her new friend Jaune.

"You're my new hero." Her older sister laughed, clapping a hand on Jaune's shoulder.

"Oh come on. Tell me you wouldn't do the same thing if you were in my shoes." He said humbly between a few chuckles.

"Yang!" Ruby called out to her sister.

"Hey Rubes/Ruby." Both blondes said at the same time. As both turned to each other, the stare they gave held the same question.

"She's my sister." Yang went first.

"She helped me find my way here." He answered last. They then both turned to look at the youngest out of them.

"So Rubes, how was class?" Yang asked, leaning on the lockers.

"We got a new classmate. No big deal." She tried to act cool in front of them. "Also, something might have _popped out._"

"Okay?" She said, not sure where her baby sis was going with her sentence.

"Yang." She said urgently. "_Something. Popped out._"

"â€¦Should I be here for this?" The other blonde asked, feeling awkward about what they were talking about. "Cuz I can just leave you two alone."

"Yeah, sorry Jaune." Ruby really meant it. "Kind of important girl talk."

As Jaune left, Ruby had explained to Yang what Crimson had told her.

"Are we safe?" Yang asked, still uneasy of what happened a few days ago. "The school's not gonna turn into some kind of digestive tract, is it?"

"That only happened to my room." Ruby said indignantly. "Besides, it's a low level, so Crimson can handle it."

"WE can handle it." It piped in after feeling it was safe to talk.

"Right." Ruby nodded, preparing to get to class. "So I'm headed off to chemistry lab. If anything does happen â€¦I'll wing it from there."

>During Chemistry

"So what are we trying to do again?" Ruby asked Weiss as they were now lab partners.

"We're trying to make a super saturated solution that will crystallize the moment there is a change in temperature." Weiss had explained once more.

"What?" To be fair, Ruby may be a prodigy, but it was Chemistry where she failed the most.

"â€¦Are you really a prodigy?" Weiss muttered under her breath. Shaking her head, she grabbed the vials Ruby was holding. "Nevermind. Just hand me the beakers and other stuff when I ask for them."

"Okay." After a few minutes of the Ruby following Weiss's orders, their solution was almost complete.

"Now, Ruby." Weiss said slowly. "I want you to turn the dial slowly as I continue to stir the solution. Got it?"

"Got it." Sadly, Ruby had turned to quickly and had caused the temperature to change too dramatically. What happened next was the whole solution expanding until it was a giant crystal on their table.

"You â€¦DOLT!" Weiss snapped, seeing her work destroyed. "I told you to turn it slowly."

"â€¦I'm sorry." Ruby tried to apologize. Sadly, Weiss wasn't having any of it.

"Just forget it." She grumbled walking out. Ruby had followed her into the restrooms. "Leave me alone!"

"I really am sorry." Ruby apologized again. "If we head back to class, we can redo the experiment and get it right this time."

"I don't want to be here!" Weiss shouted through the stall door. "I hate it here. I â€¦I have no friends here."

Suddenly, there was a deep tremor as the water in the stall had started leaking.

"This is bad Ruby." Crimson whispered to not alert Weiss.

"I think I know how the symbiote got past me." It said, remembering how sweaty Ruby was during her first class. "I think it leaked out through your pores as sweat."

"Eew." Ruby said, seeing toilet water flowing out of the stalls. "Weiss. Let's get out of here. All the stalls are overflowing."

She was met with silence. "â€¦Weiss?"

"It's here Ruby." Crimson said, feeling the symbiote appear. "Brace yourself!"

As Crimson had shifted back into cloak form, the doors Weiss was behind were blasted open. Luckily, Crimson had swatted them away before they could hit Ruby. As Crimson had lowered it's guard, both host and symbiote saw Weiss with the waters forming around her and crystallizing into a dress.

"The symbiote will take over other people too?" Ruby asked her cloak.

"It looks like they're both trying to fight for control." It answered back, hearing the screams the other creature was making. After a few seconds, Weiss had stepped out of the stall looking at the two of them with narrowed eyes.

"Weiss?" Ruby called out to her. "You okay in there?"

She got her answer as Weiss had formed a sword out of water and had lunged towards her.

"Not today!" Crimson shouted, grabbing her and throwing her out the window.

"Weiss!" Ruby shouted, worried for the new student. "Crimson stop! You're hurting her!"

"If you haven't noticed, SHE'S TRYING TO KILL US!" It shouted back, bringing the two of them outside.

"Can't you just eat the symbiote now?" She tried to reason with it.

"It's still too strong." It explained. "If I try to eat it now, it'll rip right through the both of us. Literally. We gotta weaken it first."

"So it's like Pokemon!" Ruby concluded, narrowly dodging a swipe at her head.

"I don't know what that is, but if that's how you see itâ€¦" Crimson had caught the blade with one of it's tendrils as Weiss had tried to do an overhead slash. "Argh!"

"Crimson!" Ruby shouted, seeing a piece of it tear off. She had ran off and hid in the forestry around the school to check on her cloak. "Are you okay?"

"I can't fight her alone like this Ruby!" It seethed in pain. "Think of a weapon! Something to combat against her."

"But I don't know how to do that!" She said getting scared.

"I'm not just a cloak you idiot!" It shouted to her. "We are one! I need you to sync with me. Remember that feeling in your head. All that power! Put me on."

"But I am wearing you!" She cried, not understanding what it meant.

"No you're not!" It growled. "I'm the one doing most of the work while you're just cowering behind me! I need you to fight with me."

"â€¦Okay." She said, feeling determination. "Crimson, I'm putting you on!"

Suddenly Ruby could feel herself getting lighter. Her eyes had turned silver again and her uniform became a deep black that absorbed the light around it.

"Lets go partner." Crimson said, swirling as Ruby had ran off at a quick speed to find Weiss.

>With Weiss

The Ice Queen was currently looking around for Ruby. Students were still in class, and were paying no mind to the girl dressed in all white shifting through the trees looking for her opponent.

Suddenly she was knocked off the branch she was standing on as Ruby had drop kicked her to the ground

"Sorry Weiss." She apologized. "But it's for your own good."

It was a game of cat and mouse as Weiss had tried to attack Ruby, while Ruby had continued to dodge every strike.

"Come on, kid!" Crimson shouted in her head. "Think of a weapon quick and go to town on her!"

_"__Not yet!"_ She thought, waiting for the perfect moment. Once Weiss was starting to slow down and showed signs of sweating, Ruby had decide to taunt her by opening her arms wide almost saying 'come get me.'

Taking the bait, Weiss had went for an overhead swing with all her might.

_'__Now!'_ Ruby thought, thinking of a weapon forming in her hands. Crimson had tore a piece of itself onto her hands and marveled as Ruby had turned it into a giant scythe.

Not able to stop from the momentum, Weiss's blade had shattered on contact with the scythe. Taking the chance, Ruby had pointed the top end of the scythe at her opponent and marveled as fireworks were shot out, pelting her until she was on her knees.

"It's also a magic caster?" Crimson said in awe at what the scythe could do. "Now that's imagination! Where'd you get the idea from?"

"Anime." Ruby said, as she and Crimson shifted back into schoolgirl mode. "Can you eat the symbiote now?"

"I can try." Separating from her, Crimson had wrapped itself around Weiss's head and started moving around. For some reason, Ruby had to look away because of how it kept wrapping around the new girl too suggestively. After a few minutes, Weiss was back in her school uniform. "All done."

"So you got rid of it all?" She asked, still not staring at it.

"I ran into a bit of a problem." Seeing her stare at it for answers, Crimson explained. "So don't be mad, but there was a part of the symbiote that is stuck to her. It's a perfect match, and I can't separate the two."

"This won't be a problem fro us in the future, will it?" Ruby was not looking forward to fighter her again.

"It might, but that's for the future to decide." It waved off. "I'd suggest bringing her back to the stall and pretending this whole thing didn't happen. She won't remember a thing."

>A few minutes later

After putting her back in the stall and waking her up, Ruby had asked Weiss an important question.

"Why can't we be friends?" She said, extending a hand out.

"â€¦We can." She accepted the hand, shaking it slowly. "How long was I out for?"

"You sorta cried yourself to sleep in there." Ruby lied while putting on a sheepish grin. "I waited for a the whole chem. lab to give you some time."

"Thanks." She said, getting out of the stall. "I guess we won't be passing this chemistry experiment."

"You get used to it." Ruby laughed. "I've failed it tons of times, but somehow passed with an ok."

"â€¦You dolt." Weiss laughed, walking out of the bathroom with her new friend. The two didn't notice her hair tie squirming before it had looked similar to a tiny crown.

>Outside

"So that's what happened." A shadow said in a sultry tone as it witnessed the fight between the two girls. "Looks like the power I was looking for was misplaced. â€¦Time to get it back."

Ruby didn't know it, but she had stepped into a new world where she was now in trouble. This was her first step into being a magical girl.

>AN: So what do you guys think? Just like most of my stories, besides NoL:BV, this one won't heavily focus on romance. We get enough of those on the site. â€¦You'd think that people would've had enough of all these silly love fics. I look around and I guess it isn't so. I guess some people wanna fill the site with love fics. Nothing wrong with that.

Anyways! (enough of Paul McCartney â€¦for now)

Next time on Ruby-Chan:

"I'm just getting warmed up!"

"Not now!"

"Yikes! â€¦You should really get that looked into."

"Look, a hooded vigilante has arrived."

"Crimson! I'm putting you on!"

"I feel like Batman!"

"Bad kitty!"

>Chapter 3: Black Cat

Things were looking up for Ruby after she had learnt to accept Crimson as a part of her now. But like all things, they had set boundaries. Or to be more honest: Yang had set boundaries.

Rule one was that she would not transform into Silver-Eyed Ruby unless she really needed to.

Rule two was that they would try to keep it a secret, just in case someone got too crazy or their parents found out. That'd end the sisters happy times together.

The older sister would have thought of more rules, but she was called on duty to do delivery before she could think of more.

But those rules didn't bother her. Things were still great for her. She had found two friends yesterday. It was even better when the guy liked the same things as she did and the girl was a smarty-pants that could help her in her worst subject.

So here Ruby was, clinging onto the head of a Nevermore, as Crimson had called it. They were currently flying through the city area with the little schoolgirl trying to decapitate it.

"Use the fireworks." Her cloak suggested mentally.

"I cant!" Ruby said, concerned that her misfires would hit the people below. Trying her hardest to pierce it's feathers around the neck, which were hard as steel, she didn't notice the giant avian turning to fly straight up.

Losing her footing, Ruby had almost fell at from a dangerous height but had caught her a hold of the tail feathers. Using some speed to get back up, she had started stabbing the blade into the Nevermore's back. Feeling it lurch, she continued her actions until it had enough and started taking a nose-dive to crash into the ground below.

"Get me to it's head!" Crimson shouted. "It's weak enough for me to eat now!"

As the scythe wielder got to the head, Crimson had elongated to wrap itself around the neck of the flying beast.

"Crimson?" Ruby shouted, seeing the ground approaching fast.

After she heard a loud snap, the avian had started flowing into the cloak. As they had reached the asphalt, people had rushed over to see the cloak swallow the feet of the giant bird and Ruby covering her whole head and face with her cloak.

With all the people, Crimson had tried it's best to shroud as much of Ruby as possible. Soon reporters had started swarming, trying to get an interview.

"Who are you hooded vigilante?"

"What was that thing you fought?"

"Can I get a shot of you?"

Not liking them pulling on it, Crimson had lashed out and whipped a few who were grabbing it too forcefully.

Using her speed, Ruby had ran as fast as she could until she was in a secluded place where she could change back to normal.

"I hate those kind of reporters." Her cloak growled, changing back into ribbon form. "I could feel the desperation on them."

"Let's just forget about it." Ruby said, shrinking her scythe into a keychain she strapped on her belt. "We saved the town from a giant bird, avoided being found out, and you got to eat. I think I deserve a fine meal myself."

"What'd you have in mind?" It asked, looking forward to anything besides-

>"Fast food again!" Crimson grumbled as it's host had started shoveling fries into her mouth. They were seated in a burger joint called MacReinolds.

"Got a problem with that?" She said with a few ketchup stains under her lip. "I'm a growing girl. And I need all the nutrients I can get."

"We've been coming here after every Grimm extermination." It complained. "Every time we come here, I start smelling like grease and old fries."

"You get to eat dangerous things, so I get to have my burger." She said, unwrapping her quatro-pounder cheeseburger.

"But the things I eat actually make me stronger." It countered. "And the stronger I get, the stronger you get."

"So there's no harm in me eating this if all the Grimm we hunt make us powerful." She closed the conversation, taking a bite out of the fast-food.

"Let's hope you're right. For your sake." Crimson muttered before growling as some grease had landed on it. "Aww come on!"

Outside Ruby's apartment door

"When we get in, I'm going in the washers." Crimson told it's host, still sour about the stains it received.

"Mmhm." She nodded, licking her teeth of some of the food residue. Before she could turn the knob, her favorite aunt and one of her new friends had walked out of her door. "Aunt T? Jaune?"

"Oh, hi Ruby." Her aunt greeted her while holding Jaune's hand. "I see you've met Jaune."

"Yeah. I helped him on his way to school yesterday." She nodded, trying to find the connection between the two. "How do you know him?"

"He's my son." She said casually. "He'll be living with me from now on. Isn't that great?"

This had shocked Ruby. She had no idea her guardian even had a son. She didn't seem the type to have one. To find out it was the same guy she had made as her first friend was a great coincidence.

"So this is the surprise you were talking about yesterday?" She asked, seeing Jaune giving her an embarrassed grin.

"Yup!" She said, hugging her son too tight by the look on the blonde's face. "I had to be separated from him for four years with the only contact being through my computer. Imagine my surprise when he comes back to me almost my height."

"Why don't we head out to eat mom?" Jaune groaned, still being squeezed. "I'm sure Ruby wants to head in by now."

"Okay." Tifania relented, letting her son go. "Alright Ruby, we'll be seeing you later."

"Yeah." She nodded dumbly, still surprised of the new info. As she walked inside and took of her shoes, she had one thing to shout. "YANG!"

A few minutes later

Yang was not amused to having her sister shouting out her name in panic. She also didn't like it that she had barreled through the kitchen in a frenzy only to find her sister had shouted for no good reason.

"This better be good." She said standing with arms folded after turning off the stove for her supper. "I was making peanut butter jelly wings."

After retelling of what had happened outside, Yang was also having the same shocked look as her sister.

"Aunt T has a son?" She said to herself in disbelief. "She doesn't even look the type to have kids."

"That's what I thought." Her sister supported.

Somewhere at a diner in Vale, Tifania was feeling insulted for some reason.

A few minutes later

"You didn't get into any trouble today, did you?" Yang asked, setting the table.

"Nope." Her little sister said, putting a wing on her plate. Yang was unaware of the giant bird she had fought since she had to make a delivery in a different part of town, so all was well.

"â€¦Good to know nothing strange happened today." Yang believed her, turning on the tv to the news.

_"__-and the mysterious hooded vigilante that took down the bird just ran off." _A witness told one of the reporters. _"That was some freaky stuff, cuz there was like, a giant bird flying around, then next thing, it starts falling to the ground, and there's the hood girl."_

_"__Thank you for your time." _A reporter with purple hair said, getting back into the camera shot. _"This is Lisa Lavender bringing you nothing but the truth."_

"â€¦Didn't get into trouble huh?" Ruby didn't even bother staring at her sister. She could feel the glare piercing her head.

The next morning

Yang wasn't too hard on her for lying about the other day. All she did was take away her game console and manga collection. Sure, Ruby cried and begged while clutching her big sister's leg for hours, but she got over it. Her laptop still had the manga sites and most of her games were on there.

"Morning Crimson." Ruby yawned, waving at her cloak on the door.

"Guhâ€¦" It said sounding disgusted.

"What's up with you?" The freshman asked.

"Are youâ€¦ feeling okay?" It asked unsure of what it was seeing.

"No different from yesterday." She answered, heading to the kitchen to get breakfast.

As Ruby got to the kitchen area, she saw Yang putting some notes into her bag.

"Morning sis." She greeted her older sibling.

"Morning Ruâ€“!" Yang had stopped what she was doing as she looked to her little sister. As she got closer, she had prodded her sister's forehead. "Yikes! â€¦You should really get that looked into."

"Get what looked into?" She asked, not understanding what the two in her house were getting weird about.

"â€¦Have you looked in a mirror lately?" Yang asked, pulling out a pocket mirror and handing it over.

As Ruby looked at her reflection, Yang had quickly caught he mirror after Ruby had almost dropped it. But Yang would do the same if her head started sprouting huge pimples.

"How could this happen?" Ruby asked herself, covering her forehead.

"I-its okay Rubes." The busty blonde tried to comfort her. "With a little make-up, no one will notice."

"I told you that fastfood would come to bite you back later." Crimson said, floating onto the table.

"Oh shut up!" Ruby growled at her partner while still covering her forehead. "OW!"

The little highschooler had felt something bite her hand.

"Uhâ€¦" Both cloak and blonde said, seeing something new.

"Make up is not gonna cover that up." Yang muttered, trying not to stare at her sister.

"I didn't really mean what I said literally." Crimson muttered, sauntering up to Yang.

"What?" As Yang opened up her mirror to answer her sister, Ruby was stunned by what she was seeing. If the pimples weren't bad enough, now they were squirming and chomping about with tiny teeth!

"I cant go to school like this!" She cried, poking one of the chomping pimples. "I'll just stay home until these things go away."

"You cant stay here either Rubes." Yang tried to reason. "Aunt T will get suspicious and try to check up on you."

"Well what am I supposed to do?" She lamented.

"I got it!" Crimson said, jumping on Ruby's head and tying itself properly. "Ta-dah! Headband Crimson."

"But aren't headbands against the school dresscode?" Ruby asked her sister.

"Bandanas." She corrected. "If you looked at what other girls are wearing, you'd see a few wearing headbands that cover their foreheads too."

With that out of the way, the two sisters had started preparing to head out.

"Is no one going to praise me?" Crimson asked, still atop Ruby's head.

On the way to the bus stop

Usually Yang would be riding to school on her bicycle, but it was currently getting it's chain tightened. On the way, they had met up with Jaune who asked about the headband.

"I'm trying a new look." Ruby lied, remembering the excuses she and Yang had talked about.

"I'd try to be careful with headbands though." He warned. "If those things aren't washed properly, then you might start getting pimples."

"Yeah Rubes." Yang teased, loving the irony. "Don't wanna get things popping now, do you?"

"If she did pop them, we'd have to start calling her Craterface." Jaune joined in the teasing.

"Oh shut up you two!" She grumbled, seeing they were nearing the transport. As they got on, Ruby had spotted Weiss waving at her. "I found my seat."

"You don't have motion sickness like your mom does, do you Jaune?" Yang asked her fellow classmate.

"Depends: does the driver like to step on the brakes hard?" He asked.

"Nope." Yang understood where he was going with.

"Then we have no problems." He said, finding the two a seat next to a girl with black hair in a bow.

With Ruby and Weiss

"I like the headband." Weiss commented while scooting over for her new friend.

"Thanks." Ruby said, shifting her bag to get comfortable. "I think I'll stop wearing it after today after what Jaune and Yang were talking about."

"Were they the two blondes you walked in with?" The smart girl asked.

"Yeah." Ruby nodded. "Yang's my older sister, and the guy is my new neighbor who's also the son of me and Yang's legal guardian."

Seeing Weiss looking at her confused, Ruby had explained the whole dynamics of how things were with her. After she was done, all was clear with the white haired girl.

"Now I get it." She nodded. "â€¦But what did they say about the headband?"

"Some stuff of how high maintenance it is." She waved off. "Like if I don't keep it constantly clean, I might start getting pimples."

"Ugh!" The Schnee made a face sticking her tongue out. "I agree with them. No one likes having those. Can you imagine what'd it be like to have your face covered in those?"

Giving a shaky nod, Ruby could feel herself withering inside if people had found out. "Oh yeah. I know."

"Psst. Ruby." Crimson whispered low enough for her to hear. He went unheard as the two girls continued to talk.

School Gates

As they arrived at school, Ruby saw an older man with red streaks in his hair and sunglasses leaning at the entrance. After Jaune and Yang had stepped out with the black haired girl behind them, he had marched off and pushed the two of them aside.

"Hey!" Yang grunted. "What's the big idea?"

"We need to talk Blake." The man growled to the girl with the black bow.

"We have nothing to talk about Adam." As she made to walk pass him, he had grabbed her arm.

"Not until you listen." He growled.

"Let go Adam." Blake struggled to get out of his grip. "You're hurting me."

"Hey buddy." Jaune stepped up with Yang in tow. "Why don't you just leave her alone. Sh-"

Before Jaune could finish his sentence, Adam had decked him in the jaw. "Stay out of this, shithead."

"Jaune!" Ruby shouted to her hurt friend. That was enough for Yang to go in swinging.

After pummeling the older man's ass into the sidewalk, she had looked over to see the teachers approaching.

"Aww man!" Yang moaned. "I'm just getting warmed up!"

"You're sister has a bit of a temper." Weiss muttered to her friend. But Ruby wasn't paying attention to her. She was looking at Blake, who was running into the school looking embarrassed.

"I hope she's alright." Ruby said to herself.

In class

As things turned out, Yang would be serving detention for fighting on school grounds. She was against it at first, but gave in when Vice Principal Goodwitch had entered. Not wanting Ruby to walk home alone, Jaune had offered to go with her with Weiss also offering to follow much to Yang's appreciation.

So here Ruby was, sitting in literature with Weiss taking notes religiously as she did in every class they had shared together.

"Ruby." Crimson whispered.

"Not now!" She made a low whine knowing what would happen. Usually, this meant something had come out.

"Relax." It said calmly. "I just wanted to tell you that you're mutant pimples are gone."

"Really?" She whispered in glee. "So all my pimples are gone?"

"Whoa there." Crimson had tried to slow her excitement. "I said the mutant pimples are gone. You still got the normal ones. Turns out, they were symbiotes. Crawled out those zits and went off somewhere else."

Ruby's head had made a loud thud on the table she shared with Weiss.

"Problem Ruby?" She asked.

"â€¦You wouldn't happen to have make up or vanishing cream on you, would you?" She asked innocently while pointing at her headband.

"â€¦You poor dear." Weiss patted her shoulder. Ruby could only cry silently.

Lunch time

"Is it that bad?" Ruby asked, pulling Crimson back and exposing her whole forehead.

"No, not really." Yang said, not looking her in the eye.

"It could be worse." Jaune failed to comfort. He was sporting a small split on his lower lip from Adam.

"It'll be gone in a few days." Weiss assured her. "Just don't agitate it."

"â€¦Thanks guys." She said, going back to her sandwich. Looking around, she spotted Blake eating alone a few tables over.

With Blake

Blake was still feeling extremely embarrassed of what happened in the morning. It was nothing but a string of unfortunate events and bad luck.

Not only had her ex-boyfriend not taken the hint that they were through, it was in front of the whole school. She was also guilty when the people she sat next to got hurt and in trouble because of her. Looking over to where the two blondes were, she noticed the one with the red headband staring at her before looking away.

Sighing at her lack of friends in school, she took a piece of her sushi that was topped off with sea urchin eggs.

Sadly, if she had looked at her lunch a few seconds ago, she would have noticed a bunch of egg like things jumping onto the meal.

With Ruby and Co

"Make sure she does her homework, okay?" Yang reminded her fellow blonde and the new girl.

"We currently don't have any." Weiss told the older girl.

"â€¦Then make sure she doesn't stop by the fast-food joint." She moved on. "We still have some leftovers in the fridge that are still good."

"â€¦Maybe that's how she got the pimples." Jaune pointed out. The two had stared at him, then to each other, and then the subject they were talking about. Said subject was currently looking elsewhere.

"Rubes." Yang called to her sister. She didn't turn.

"Ruby." Still no response. "What are you staring at?"

As the girl lifted her finger, the three followed the appendage to see Blake holding her neck and coughing. A few students had tried to get close to help her but they had either slipped or tripped over one another.

Yang and Jaune had went to her to help themselves, but had failed as Yang slipped on a drink that had fallen to the floor and had tripped Jaune on her way down.

As the two looked to the choking girl, they saw she had bolted out of the cafeteria.

With Blake

Blake was currently in the restroom trying to hack out whatever was in her throat into the sink.

_'__Just my luck.'_ She thought. Now she was choking on her favorite food. As she thought of all the crummy things that had happened to her, one person came to mind: The one who started all this. '_ADAM!_'

After that, all she saw was red.

Back with Ruby

"I think she went in here." Weiss said, pointing to the restroom with Ruby behind her.

"Careful Weiss." Ruby said concerned. "What we saw in the caf didn't look normal at all."

"We at least need to try and help." Weiss said entering the restroom. As they both got inside, they saw a giant cat leering at them with amber eyes. "â€¦Time to go."

As the two ran out the restroom, the beast had gave chase. Running from it wasn't as easy since lockers had somehow fallen, doors had almost opened on them, and water fountains had started spraying crazy as they passed by. Students and teachers had stayed in the classrooms in case the beast spotted them.

"It's like we're having a case of extreme bad luck!" Weiss shouted, turning a corner. As a light had fallen between them, she and Ruby had to split up when they were at an intersection. Luckily for Weiss, the creature had decided to chase after Ruby.

"The coast is clear Ruby." Crimson said after they had entered the janitor's closet.

"Crimson! I'm putting you on!" She shouted as she transformed.

"â€¦Do you have to keep shouting that?" It mumbled at her catchphrase.

"It sounds cool." She pouted. "Do you want me to say 'Transform me' instead?"

"I'd prefer nothing at all!" Their argument had been put on hold when the beast had found them.

"Crescent Rose!" Ruby shouted, transforming her keychain into scythe mode.

"And you finally gave it a name! And it's a cool one too." Crimson shouted in her head. "I see how it is."

"Not now Crimson!" She berated her cloak as she jumped over the beast as it lunged at her. The creature had hit it's head on the wall hard from it's miss.

"Aâ€¦dam!" The beast growled.

"â€¦Blake?" Ruby said, understanding who the beast was now.

As she shook her head, Blake had stared at Ruby before disappering into the shadows after breaking the lights with her tail.

"That would've been so cool if it didn't mean I had to stop her." Ruby muttered trying to feel around the room for the monster Blake.

"She's gone Ruby." Crimson told her, reverting back into headband mode. "But at least we know who her real target is."

"I feel like Batman!" She grumbled, leaning on the wall. "Except I don't have a sidekick or a butler to help me in my times of need."

"Focus!" Her cloak scolded. "We know she's aiming for that guy this morning. So all we need to do is get to the guy first."

"But how are we going to find him?" Before it could answer, students had started crowding the halls after they figured the beast was gone.

"Ruby!" Weiss shouted, running up to her looking all wet.

"Weiss!" She hugged her friend before quickly letting go. "â€¦Why are you all wet?"

"I ran into the pool." She answered with a blush. "I figured since it was a cat, it wouldn't like water."

"Smart." She commented. "I just ran into the closet until it passed me by."

"Are you guys okay?" Jaune asked, walking up to them with Yang right beside him. After retelling of what happened to them, things had started to cool down.

"Think this'll get me out of detention?" Yang asked, hoping she could go home.

Afterschool

As it turned out, Yang still had to attend her detention. Weiss had followed halfway before her sister had spotted her and had dropped Ruby and Jaune off at their apartment.

"Bye Weiss! See you tomorrow." Ruby waved to her friend. "And thanks for the ride Ms. Schnee."

"Please." Weiss's sister said behind the wheel. "Ms. Schnee was our mother. Call me Winter."

"Okay." Ruby nodded. "Thanks again Winter."

"Anything for a friend of my wittle Weissy Weiss." She teased her baby sister.

"See what I have to live with?" Weiss said to her friend in a dead tone.

"I know the feeling all too well." As the two kindred spirits said their goodbyes, Jaune had told Ruby that he'd be heading out to find a part-time job to help his mom with the expenses.

After heading up, Ruby had ran into her aunt who was asking where her son was. After explaining where he went, Tifania had given a proud smile and had patted Ruby on the head.

As Ruby entered her home, she had put away her stuff and opened her window. "Okay Crimson. We're going to scour the city for Blake. I'm sure we'll be able to find her."

"SOMEBODY HELP ME!" The two heard a man shout, sounding extremely close to where they were. Looking out, they saw Adam being dragged by Blake as she hopped on the roofs with Adam tied by her tail.

"That was fast. â€¦Crimson, you know what to do." Ruby said, jumping out the window as she and Crimson combined.

With Blake

She finally had him. All the pain she had because of him will be paid back three times over. After scaring him and dragging him through the city, she had decided it was time to finish it all.

Dropping him on his head, she took him in her pawed arms and flung him off the roof to get squashed in the busy streets below.

"Bad kitty!" Ruby shouted, appearing and saving Adam before he could meet the pavement below.

Not liking her prey being saved, Blake charged at the both of them.

Before Ruby could get out of the way, Crimson had gotten hooked on a pipe they hadn't noticed.

"Really?" They both shouted before Blake had tackled all of them off the roof. As they hit the pavement below, Crimson had cushioned the blow so Ruby wouldn't feel the pain.

Taking Crescent Rose out, the Ruby and Blake had started fighting while some on-lookers snapped photos on their phone. Ruby made sure to stay in open areas so Blake's bad luck trick wouldn't affect her. After dodging a swipe by her tail, Ruby had sliced off the appendage.

"Ha-hah!" She said in victory. Sadly it was short lived as two had taken it's place. "Aww come on!"

As the two fought, they didn't notice Adam getting up. As he reached into his coat, he pulled out a gun and had shot Blake's leg from the side.

"Take that you bitch!" He shouted, firing another into her other leg.

"Ruby!" Crimson shouted in her head urgently. "Stop him! If he keeps shooting her, Blake will die!"

Not wanting that to happen, Ruby had pelted Adam with fireworks until he had dropped his gun. As he reached for it, Crimson had lashed out and absorbed it into it. Ruby's scythe was affected by it as it started turning more mechanical in features.

"Awesome." Ruby whispered, seeing her scythe gain an upgrade.

"Enough dawdling!" Crimson said hastily. "Let's absorb the symbiote before Blake can recover!"

"Right!" As Crimson started absorbing the symbiote like it did with Weiss, Ruby had made sure to keep her face hidden from the crowd that was growing.

"I'm gonna get you both for this." Adam growled behind her, while taking out a knife. Before he could do anything, someone had decked him in the jaw.

"That was for this morning." A familiar voice said. Peeking behind her, Ruby saw it was Jaune who was standing over Adam with Yang behind him picking up the knife.

"Didn't know you had it in you bud?" Yang patted the blonde. She gave Ruby a look that said 'get on with it!'

"I took up lessons with my mom." Jaune told her. As he turned to Ruby, she was back to her cloaked self with the hood covering her. "Good job with the giant cat and all."

"â€¦Thank you citizen!" Ruby said, trying to make her voice deep and a deep red blush on her face. "And you can help me more by taking care of this girl!"

Before Jaune knew what happened, Ruby had placed a naked Blake in his arms and had rushed off.

"D-did she just put a naked girl in my arms?" Jaune asked Yang, not daring to look up. "Why didn't she give her to you?"

"Easy buddy." Yang said, taking Blake off his hands. "I'll take her from here. Looks like she's really out of it."

"Do we even know where she lives?" Jaune said, draping his hoodie over her. After a minute, Yang was looking at him funny. "What?"

"Doesn't Aunt T have like, a lot of room in her apartment?" Yang started. Jaune was not liking where this was going. "I remember her giving Rubes and me separate rooms before our paperwork was done."

"â€¦No." He said. He could just imagine what would happen. "No, no, noâ€¦"

With Ruby

"What the heck was that, Crimson?" Ruby said angrily, tossing the cloak on the floor of her room hard.

"EASY!" It said, not liking the rough play. "How was I supposed to know the symbiote ate all her clothes?"

"At least tell me she doesn't have any traces of it in her?" Ruby begged for a miracle. After gaining silence, she felt she shouldn't have dared to hope. "It's at least compatible with her like Weiss and us, right?"

"That's the thing Ruby." It started. "I'm still complete. Those things will take a while to heal up and grow again. If you're thinking they'll be strong like you â€¦I'd give it a few months. And I don't even know what the outcome will be. Not all symbiotes are like me. We're all different in a way."

"I just hope nothing bad happens to them." She said, scooping it off the floor and hugging it to her chest. "â€¦You think Yang and Jaune will be okay with Blake?"

Suddenly, they heard footsteps and knocking on Tifania's door.

"Jaune, you're â€“ WHAT IS GOING ON?" They heard Tifania shout through the door. "WHY ARE YOU HOLDING A NAKED GIRL YANG? AND WHY'S SHE WEARING JAUNE'S JACKET?"

"I can explain!" They could hear Jaune frantically trying to calm his mom.

"GRANDKIDS?" Aunt T shouted in glee and anger.

"Sorry." Ruby whispered through the door. Putting a hand to her forehead, she felt nothing but smooth skin. "Oh hey, my pimples are gone."

"DON'T GO LAUGHING YANG XIAO LONG! YOU'RE AS MUCH A PART OF THIS!" Ruby could just feel her games and comics slipping through her fingers.

It would be three weeks before Yang had forgiven her and gave back her stuff. And it would be a week before Tifania could trust Jaune to walk from home to school and back without her following him from behind.

AN: And that's the end of that chapter. Hope you guys enjoyed. Remember to read and review. **

Omake:

Ruby had walked into her apartment bathroom to do her usual routine. Those included brushing teeth, taking a shower, and using the toilet. And after her, Yang would come in thirty minutes later to do her things.

Ten minutes later

SLAM!

Ruby had ran out of her restroom looking both embarrassed and panicked at the same time. As Yang saw her little sister run into her room she noted that her sister's slippers were red instead of their usual white.

Scratching her head, Yang decided to take her morning shower earlier than she did. As she opened the door, she immediately closed it before she stepped a foot in.

"RUBY!" She shouted, stomping over to her sister's door. As shetried to turn the knob, she found it locked.

"It wasn't me!" The culprit denied.

"I know it was you." Yang growled, pounding on the door. "I also know you're the only one that can fix it!"

"I still say it wasn't me!" She still denied. "I blame the water company!"

"Then explain to me," Yang sad through gritted teeth. "HOW the water company could turn the whole bathroom into a bloody river!"

"It's not that bad." She tried to play it off as something small.

"You get out here and fix your mess right now." Yang commanded with finality.

Outside

Jaune and Weiss were looking at each other with huge blushes on their faces. They could hear everything.

"Is it like that with most sisters, orâ€¦?" Jaune asked the white haired girl.

"â€¦Sometimes." She said, not daring to knock on the door.

"Oh god! It's pouring into the halls!" They heard Yang shout through the door. At that, the two bolted out the apartment and decided to wait for them at the bus stop.

AN: Yes, I know. It's that. If you guys had read the latest chapter of Those Days, you'd know that there would be stuff like this added in. It's puberty. There's those things. There're a lot of things.

Anyways!

Chapter 4: Labor Pains

Things with Yang had cooled down after she had forgiven her for throwing under the bus. She had to anyways since Blake was now living with them in their own apartment. The once giant cat had told them of how she was an orphan and that Adam was her ex-boyfriend that was also part of a gang called the White Fang. When she couldn't take any more of his attitude and lifestyle, she stormed off to find a better home. It wasn't working well since she had to sleep in the park and use the public restrooms in the park to clean herself.

Instead of rejecting her like other people had done, Aunt Tifania had taken it upon herself to take care of her. As it also had turned out, Tifania was also an ex-gang member from her old days. She was part of a group called avalanche that fought for the rights of the people that were being forced out to a war that wasn't theirs. That's where she met Jaune's dad, and she had stopped there.

So Blake was now their new roommate. She couldn't stay with Tifiania and Jaune since her aunt was still suspicious of why she was found naked in Yang's arms. Although with the way she kept trying to get Blake and Jaune to go out on errands together â€¦Ruby was getting mixed signals. Was her aunt trying to replicate her husband's and her love story?

Another thing that had changed was Ruby's secret.

"Another successful hunt, Ruby?" Blake asked from their couch, not bothering to look up from her book as she heard Ruby slide through an open window.

Yes, Blake had found out her secret. It wasn't that hard since she had walked into a living room Ruby had accidentally turned into a giant digestive tract when she was starving. After Ruby had gotten the room back to normal and Blake had met Crimson, she had relented in keeping the secret safe.

"It was just another Beowulf." The little girl said, taking Crimson off who floated to the coffee table. "There haven't been any symbiotes popping out of me lately, so all things are going easy."

"Speak for yourself." Crimson growled.

"Are you going to be acting like this all day?" Ruby tapped a foot on the floor at her cloaks attitude. "I don't know what's going on with you. You've been snarky and moody since yesterday."

"Well maybe you can eat twenty Nevermores and still be happy." It sassed.

"At least we can fly on Crescent Rose now." She muttered under her breath. "Besides, you said the more Grimm you eat, the stronger we become."

"Just leave me alone." Crimson cried, flying into the bathroom.

"I haven't known Crimson as long as you have, but has it always been like that?" The black haired girl asked her new friend.

"No." She pouted. "It used to be cool and gave me advice. Now it just keeps sassing me."

"Maybe Crimson will feel better tomorrow." She said, patting the freshman's back.

"Thanks Blake." Ruby said, pulling the older girl into a hug.

The next day

"Wake up Ruby!" Crimson called to her in a happy tone.

"You're feeling chipper." Ruby mumbled, still feeling sleepy.

"I am!" It said with glee. Ruby could have sworn she saw it twirl. "Isn't today wonderful?"

"It's a weekend." She muttered, putting her head back on her pillow. "Let me sleep in."

"But I have such wonderful news to tell you." Crimson whined, nuzzling her like a cat.

"What is it?" She whined back, not opening her eyes.

"I'm pregnant!" It squealed.

"That's nice. Congrats." After a few seconds, Ruby had shot up fully awake. "PREGNANT?"

"I know!" The cloak gushed. "I was shocked as you were. But now I'm happy."

"H-how?" She stammered. "Why?"

"That's easy to answer." Crimson plopped on her lap to start it's explanation. "With all the Grimm I've been eating, I've grown more powerful. But with all that power, some waste is backed up in me. So I need to let some of it out. And when I do, it'll be another symbiote, only less powerful."

"â€¦When are you due?" Ruby asked, preparing for the worst.

"Won't be that long." It assured her. "I'd say by noon."

"Great. We have no problems then." Ruby could handle that. They'd just stick indoors until it gave birth.

"About thatâ€¦" The fabric said in a singsong tone.

"What?" She did not like that tone.

"Weâ€¦ wont be able to transform until then." She felt a migraine brewing. "It put's too much strain on the split."

A few minutes later

"So you're cloak is pregnant." Blake repeated, with Yang staring blankly at her. "â€¦I believe you."

"You do?" Ruby asked, not expecting them to.

"Rubesâ€¦ I've seen you make things I wish I hadn't." Yang explained herself. "You're cloak being preggers is a lot tamer."

"And I was a giant cat a few days ago." Blake added in. "By now, we'd be stupid not to believe you."

"At least it'll be just us three here." The older sister said, leaning back on her chair.

KNOCK KNOCK!

"â€¦Were we expecting anyone?" Blake asked the two.

"Ruby, are you ready?" Weiss's voice called through the door.

"Oh shoot!" Ruby said, stuffing Crimson in her room before running out. "I forgot I was going out with Weiss to the mall today! I'll be out in a minute!"

"So you're just going to leave your pregnant cloak behind?" Yang tsked, before looking to Blake. "It's a sad day when the new generation wont take responsibility."

"Indeed." Blake played along. "Let's hope the child wont resent her in the future."

"â€¦Fine, I'll take Crimson along." Ruby relented. "But where will you two be?"

"I'm following you." The blonde said, putting on her white coat. "With Crimson and you not being able to transform, you'll need all the help you can get."

"I wanna help you." Blake said. The two could hear the but coming. "But Tifania wanted me to go look for a job."

"No better place to look for a job like the mall." Yang said, putting an arm around her.

Seeing she wasn't getting out of it, Blake had resigned to follow.

Vale Mall

"I think this looks good on me." Weiss said, striking a pose wearing a white shawl. "What do you guys think?"

"Can you even afford it?" Yang gaped, looking at the price tag. "I'd have to make twenty-five deliveries a month to get the one on my size."

As the two got into another conversation about prices and fashion, Ruby was off to the side looking at a pair of boots that were in her price range.

"Find anything you like Ruby?" Blake said, walking behind her.

"Just looking at these boots." She said, pointing it out. "How's the job search coming along?"

"I'm â€¦getting there." Blake said with a sheepish grin. "A few places had a good time frame, but the time and work demand seemed too much for a part-time deal."

"Are you sure you told them specifically it was for a part-time and not a full-time worker?" Yang asked, saddling up to them with Weiss in tow. "Some people ignore that info part, so you gotta be sure you give the specifics."

"â€¦I'm going back to the bookstore." The blonde and Weiss had facepalmed while Ruby had taken the boots to try on.

In the changing room

"Ruby." Crimson moaned when they were alone. She was in the middle of trying on the boots and looking herself in the mirror.

"What is it now Crimson?" Ruby asked worried. "It can't be another portal. I've been feeling fine all day."

"It's not that." It groaned in pain. "I was wrong. â€¦It's happening now!"

"You're going to give birth now?" Ruby panicked, not sure how a cloak would give birth.

"YES!" Jumping off Ruby, Crimson had started flapping about. Soon, it started to grow in size and convulse before tearing itself into three.

"Crimson?" Ruby moved to pick up the three pieces, but the two smaller ones had liquefied and zoomed out of the changing room.

"My babies." Crimson groaned, trying to give chase but failing. "We have to catch them before they try and find a host."

"You don't sound too good." She worried, putting Crimson back on.

"I'm gonna be sick!" Without warning, it had opened wide once more and spewed out two giant bears out of the changing room, destroying the door. They had hobbled off weak, but they were still dangerous to have around. A few seconds later, they heard screaming.

"Aren't those the Ursa you ate the other day?" Ruby was now panicking. She had fully hoped for a day without Grimm appearing.

"Those things take two days to fully digest." Crimson groaned.

"Then let's get them back in you!" She told her cloak, trying to transform. When nothing happened, she asked what was wrong.

"I'm still too tired to combine with you." It explained, breathing raggedly. "Splitting takes a lot of energy and is painful."

"So if we took too much damage in battle, we'd turn back?" She asked, remembering the times they had taken a lot of damage.

"Exactly." It said. "That's why we need to catch my children. They're newborns and are full of energy. They can help us if you become a host for them as well."

"Then let's go find them!" She had bolted out of the changing room with the unpaid boots still on.

With Yang and Weiss

"What is going on?" Weiss whispered underneath the cash register. Yang was right next to her when the Ursa had appeared.

The two had seen Ruby sprint out of the changing room with Crimson around her neck, so they were okay in hiding away from the two beasts lurking in the mall. Suddenly, Yang's phone started playing her ringtone loud, attracting the two beasts to their hiding spot.

"Scatter!" Yang shouted to Weiss, pulling her out of their spot. As they had split up with one beast Ursa chasing them, Yang had answered her phone. "Not a good time Rubes! This better be important."

_"__It is!" _Her sister answered on the other line. _"I cant transform right now and the only way I can do that is if I can find Crimson's babies!"_

"Well that's just great!" Yang said, toppling a trashcan to slow the Grimm down. "What do they look like?"

_"__Keep a look out for red blotches moving around." _Ruby explained. _"There should be two of them."_

"I'll get right on that!" Yang growled, running down the escalator hoping the Ursa was stupid not to follow. Sadly, it was a smart one. "Aww come on!"

With Weiss

"Everybody run for your lives!" The white haired teen shouted, alerting everyone that one of the Ursa was chasing her.

"Weiss!" turning to her left, Weiss saw Ruby motioning her to run to her.

"This is all crazy." She heaved, reaching her friend. The Ursa had caught someone and was now devouring him. "Where's a superhero when you need one."

"I don't know." Ruby cried, turning away from the gory scene before her. "I guess the hooded vigilante isn't coming today."

"That beast!" Weiss seethed with tears leaking down her face. ""Why cant it just go away!"

Suddenly, a circled had formed around the Ursa and started glowing a bright white. Stopping from it's meal, the Ursa looked to the glow before it was propelled upwards at an extreme speed. The force was so instant that it was now a pancake on the ceiling.

"â€¦I don't know what just happened, but I'll just call it a miracle." The now calming teen said, not noticing her hair tie faintly glowing. But Ruby had.

"Let's go and find Blake and Yang." The younger girl said, pulling her friend away.

With Yang

The bear was currently still chasing Yang. The floor she was on was abandoned as all the people had run up to the top floor. So here she was outrunning a deadly monster while still trying to slow down to look for some kind of horrible offspring that could help save all their lives.

As she neared the food court, she saw something in the corner of her eyes. Turning to a table nearby, she saw two gooey looking things fighting over a basket of fries. A she ran up to them, the Ursa was now a few feet away from her. As the bear made a loud roar, it startled the two goops and they ran off the table to another area.

"Come back here!" Yang shouted, giving chase.

If things weren't so dire at the moment it would have been a comedic scene to see two goops running from a raging blonde who was being chased by a giant Grimm bear. Seeing the goops heading for a ventilation shaft, Yang dove for them and had caught them both in each hand.

"Gotcha!" She said in triumph. Unfortunately it was short lived as the Ursa had caught up to her. "Oh shi-!"

BAM!

Yang had rolled out of the way from being stomped on by a giant sharp paw. Sadly, she didn't escape the jaws f the beast as it caught onto her leg.

"Aaah!" The beast had not let go and had picked her up. Her leg still in it's mouth, it started shaking her around like a rag-doll, like a cat playing with it's food.

Letting her go, she was flung through the window of a sporting goods store with cuts in her arm from the glass. As the Ursa was about to step in to finish her off, a set of books were flung at it's head.

"Over here grizzly!" Hearing a familiar voice, Yang turned her head to the side to see Blake trying to lure the bear away from her.

"Blake?" As the beast turned to the bow-wearing raven, Yang could feel the baby symbiote's in her hands squirming. Opening them, she saw they were quivering like scared puppies.

"You guys were scared too, weren't you?" She said tiredly, trying not to lose consciousness. "It's okay. Ma Yang's got ya."

"Yang!" Blake shouted, ducking a swipe that would have taken her head off. Sparing the blonde a glance, she saw she was trying to get up and limp out of the store but had fallen on her injured leg.

"No more running away you two." Yang said in pain to the two goops in her hands. After they had stopped shaking, the newborn symbiotes had crawled their way into her cut wounds. "What're you guys doing?"

Right after they were completely in her, Yang felt time slow down as she started to hear childlike voices in her head.

"No more running." One of them said. For some odd reason, Yang felt her whole body burning up in a good way.

"We wanna help you, Ma Yang." Looking down at her leg, she saw it was quickly healing up.

"The bad bear needs to go!" They both cried in her head. She felt more energetic than she's ever felt before

With Blake

"Eat this!" Blake snarled, throwing a huge encyclopedia into the Ursa's open mouth. Ready to stab a rolled up magazine in it's eye, she heard someone whistle. Turning to the source, she saw Yang stepping out of the broken window.

"Let's rock!" The blonde said, fingerless gloves forming on her hands. If Blake had looked closer, she would have seen that they were now on fire too.

As the Ursa had charged at her, Yang had caught it's paw is it descended on her with one hand.

"Payback!" She said with glee. She had done what it had did to her and started slamming it on the ground until she got bored and flung it a few feet away from her and Blake.

"Let us eat mommy!" The voices in her head cried. Without knowing it, Yang's fist had moved on their own and had turned into dragonheads that started munching on the Grimm until nothing was left of it. "Thanks for the meal!"

"You guys are something else." She smiled at the two gloves after they morphed back to normal. Turning around, she saw Blake walking up to her. "How you holding up?"

"I got my job." She said, pointing a thumb to the bookstore she was in. "You wont tell my boss I was chucking books at the thing, will you?"

"Only if we tell everyone that the hooded vigilante came here, beat the bear, then ran off." She bargained. After they shook hands on it, Yang had decided to call her sister. "Yeah. â€¦I got 'em. â€¦I took care of the bear. â€¦I'll tell you when we get back home. â€¦What happened on your end? â€¦So now she knows too. â€¦She okay with it? â€¦We'll meet you back at the apartment."

"How was she?" Blake asked concerned.

"The good news is that their bear is dead too." Yang said, tucking her phone away. "The bad news is that Weiss knows something is up, so we need to make some room at the apartment for a sleepover."

"I call dibs on the couch." The bookworm said, putting a few books away.

"So what should I name you?" Yang said, turning back to her gloves. "â€¦I'm digging Ole Betsy and The Five Avengers. You guys cool with that?"

Her two hands had slapped her at those names. "â€¦A simple no would've worked."

At the apartment â€“ Late at night

The four would have gone home early, but Ruby had forgotten to take off her new boots, and they still had the price tag on. So when the alarms had gone off, she had to stay behind and explain herself. Luckily the security was lenient since a lot of people had done the same mistake when the Ursa attacked. But after all that was settled, they had finally gotten back to their apartment.

"So you're telling me that Ruby is some sort of portal to another dimension and she's the cause of all the freaky creatures that are appearing?" Receiving a nod from all three, Weiss continued. "And not only that, she also turns into the superhero that's been running around stopping them?"

After they had nodded again, Weiss laid back on her sleeping bag to absorb all the information. "So that was you that did the whole glowing thing in the mall, Ruby?"

"I didn't do that Weiss." She denied. "Crimson didn't have enough energy at the time combine with me. And we cant do stuff like that yet."

"Powers like that differ depending on the symbiote and the host." The cloak added in, splayed on the couch. "It was faint, but I could hear the symbiote on your hair tie cast the spell."

"What do you mean my symbiote?" The white haired teen shot up, hearing the cloak's statement. She was at first shocked at meeting Crimson, but the feeling had died down after her friend had started to explain everything.

"Oh yeah." Ruby said in a hush tone, remembering an important detail she forgot to tell Weiss and Blake. "It turns out that you two got hit by a symbiote that turned you into powerful being capable of doing magic and stuff."

"And when did this happen?" Weiss said peeved.

"On your first day and when Blake became a giant cat that tried to kill her ex-boyfriend." She said meekly.

"I tried to kill Adam?" Blake voiced out. "â€¦I'm cool with that."

"So I'm infected?" Weiss brought the attention back to her.

"Hey, we're not a sickness!" One of Yang's gloves said on the coffee table.

"Yeah! We're like, the bestest thing you could ever have." The other continued.

Weiss's hair tie which was still on her head, had made a small yank to show it didn't appreciate being called as such.

"Are we still friends?" Ruby asked, scared of Weiss's answer.

"â€¦" Taking a deep breath, Weiss gave her answer. "We're still friends."

Before Ruby could jump in joy, Weiss had continued. "BUT! This means we all have a huge responsibility of learning how to control these powers and making sure we can stop whatever pops out of you."

"We're like the Sailor Senshies or Cardcaptor Sakura!" Ruby said, trying to get a high-five out of one of them. Only Yang had responded.

"I liked the Fate series." Blake said, fiddling with her bow.

"â€¦ I prefer Familiar of Zero." Weiss mumbled, not meeting their eyes.

"Really?" Yang said laying back. "I'm a Cutey Honey fan, but I also enjoyed Touhou."

Soon they were all chatting about their favorite magical anime, forgetting about their worries.

"Hold on!" Weiss said, halting the conversation temporarily. "Does this mean we can all transform?"

"â€¦Well I can, so why cant you guy?" Not hearing a 'no' from Ruby, they had started a new conversation on what they thought their transformation would look like.

END

AN: Yup! Ruby has a new ally. Or make that three. I notice not that many people are reading this like Those Days or NoL. Is it the title? I know how some titles can be misleading. Some of the reviewers of Those Days have said they brushed it off and had only gone to it out of curiosity before getting hooked. â€¦Maybe I should change the title of both of them. Anyone have a suggestion?

ANYWAYS!

NEXT TIME ON RUBY-CHAN:

"We gotta catch it!"

"That thing will give us a huge power boost!"

"Leave me alone!"

"She can't be trusted!"

AN: As some of you have noticed, I changed the title. I guess it was very off putting having a magical girl title. I hope the new one will catch more readers eyes.

>Chapter 5: Food Run

Things had gone well for Ruby and her friends as they accepted their new powers. Weiss and Blake's symbiotes still hadn't responded no matter how many times they had tried to talk to them, but there have been some signs that their powers were showing. Blake had woke the two girls in the middle of the night one time when she found her ribbon had turned into cat ears when she woke to use the bathroom.

Yang had finally named her gloves Clip and Duster as that were the only names they would accept without jumping in her face. Her transformation was different from Ruby's as instead of silver eyes, her's had turned into a glowing red.

Clip and Duster were easier for Yang to use since being gloves meant she could guide them into the Grimm. As Yang threw her punches, the gloves ate the Grimm bit by bit like ants swarming over a cookie. With a pair of aviator sunglasses and toning down the fire they made, Yang, Clip, and Duster made the perfect team.

The only one who hasn't gotten any progress at all was Weiss. She was a bit infuriated that her tie wouldn't talk to her, but she still tried to be patient.

Ruby's Room â€“Middle of the night

Ruby was currently sleeping in bed peacefully having a nice dream. Crimson was draped over her like a blanket and was shifting around, to match it's host tosses and turns.

"Heeheeâ€¦" Ruby giggled in her sleep as she enjoyed her dream. She and her cloak were unaware that a portal had opened up, as a small glowing arm had popped out of her ear and was trying to crawl out.

All Crimson did was shift again, not aware of the creature that was now hovering over the two.

The next morning

_"__Helloooo?" _A tiny voice called in a singsong tone in front of Ruby's face as it tried to wake her up.

Opening her eyes, Ruby saw a green glowing pale person with red eyes standing over her. As she sat up to greet the person, the schoolgirl had noticed that the stranger had backed away from her to the point where she was an a few inches floating in front of her. Blinking out her sleep, Ruby rubbed her eyes at what she was seeing.

"A FAIRY?" She said with shock, excitement, and glee. What she said had immediately woken up her cloak and the rest of the people she was living with.

_"__Hi." _The little creature waved at her. The happiness and sweetness was short lived as Crimson had started trying to chase her.

"We gotta catch it!" Ruby's cloak said in excitement and glee.

"Crimson!" Ruby called after he cloak as it tried once more to wrap a tendril around the glowing pixie. "What are you doing?"

"It's a fairy!" Her cloak said, not stopping in it's chase. "That thing will give us a huge power boost!"

As the cloak had the fairy cornered near the door, Yang had slammed the door open and caught Crimson in between the door and the wall.

"What's going on here?" She growled with Clip and Duster equipped. As the fairy flew past her, her gloves had started dragging Yang along as they tried to catch the new creature. "Heel guys! Heel!"

"It's a fairy!" Clip said, morphing into a dragon head to try and catch it.

"Those things are delicious!" Duster whooped, trying to clip it by the wings.

Yang was digging her heels into the apartment floor, trying to get control of her two symbiotes. "I said heel you two!"

"I called dibs!" Crimson shouted, flying out of Ruby's room. Ruby was right behind it, trying to stop Crimson from killing the innocent creature.

_"__Leave me alone!" _The fairy cried, as she flew high above them. Zwei had joined in chasing her, but he wasn't much of a threat as the symbiotes trying to eat her. As she spotted Blake, she was about to go to her when she saw the bow twitch in anticipation. Seeing an open window, the tiny creature had done something to blind all of them before rushing out to the city of Vale.

Minutes later

"I cant believe you guys!" Yang scolded her gloves. "A girl has a dream to see a fairy. And when she does get the chance, you go and chase her away!"

"She can't be trusted!" Crimson said on the couch. "Fairies may look sweet, but they're powerful creatures in our world."

"What's so dangerous about a cute little thing like her?" Ruby asked, still angry at her cloak.

"That cute little thing is capable of killing dragons, conjuring weapons way more powerful than the things we can make, and can take as much damage as it can give. The only reason they aren't the masters of the other world is because they're a cowardly bunch that are easily eaten by my kind and other creatures." The cloak said with a huff. "That's why I wanted to eat it. It would increase our powers tenfold! With that kind of power, devouring Grimm and stray symbiote would be easy."

"But she wasn't even doing anything wrong!" Blake defended the tiny creature that had flown off. "And because of you and your babies, it's now loose in the city."

"We can only hope that she doesn't fall into the wrong hands." The cloak said grimly.

With the fairy

The little pixie didn't know what was going on. One moment it was flying around, enjoying the moon glow of it's world, the next she was being sucked into another world where symbiotes were trying to eat her. She had tried to wake up the girl she had came out of to ask to be sent back home, but it had alerted the symbiote and had almost gotten her killed.

As it flew around the building, she planned to stay close to the short girl to try and ask for help one more time when the symbiotes were not around. As time passed, she saw the three girls walk out the building with their respective symbiotes still on them. Cursing her luck, she thought of flying off but spotted the blonde male behind them.

Taking a chance, she hovered close to his belongings to see if he too had a symbiote. When nothing had gone to grab her, she took her chance to hide in his bag. If she was quick enough, she could probably force her way into the short girl and be back in her home world.

With Ruby and co

"Morning Jaune." Ruby greeted her only male friend while trying to fix a stray hair.

"Morning." The blonde said sleepily, his feet dragging on the pavement.

"Late night on boobtube, Jauney boy?" Yang teased her classmate while nudging him.

"Very funny." The blonde mumbled, rubbing the sleep out of his eyes. "My mom had kept me up all night with her trying to make sure I wasn't possessed by a ghost of something. â€¦Thanks for that by the way."

"We are so sorry." The three said simultaneously. He had waved them off as they walked to the bus stop.

"By the way." He said, stretching to get himself pumped. "What was with all the screaming this morning? And don't say another ghost sighting."

"Cockroaches/Zwei pooped/A rat." They all said at the same time before staring at each other and trying again. "Cockroaches/Zwei pooped/A rat."

"â€¦Which is it?" Jaune asked, an eyebrow raised at their answer.

"There was a cockroach and a rat around Zwei's poop." Ruby said before the two could say anything.

"Nevermind." The blonde male said, walking ahead of them to get into the bus.

"Smooth." Yang patted her sister on the head, running up ahead to catch up with her fellow blonde.

"I think he believed you." Blake supported her, giving a thumbs up before running after the two.

"Wait up guys!" She whined, sprinting to keep up with them. For some odd reason, Crimson and the other symbiotes felt an urge to chase Jaune.

In the bus

The girls had gone into their usual seats. Blake and Yang sat with Jaune since they all shared the same class and grade, while Ruby and Weiss sat next to each other to discuss their own things.

"Soâ€¦" Yang said, placing an arm around Jaune's shoulder. Jaune had rolled his eyes at her tone. By now, it was clear what she wanted. As he opened his bag to grab his homework for her to copy, Yang's hand had shot into his bag and started flailing around without her control. "Wha?"

"â€¦Impatient today?" Jaune asked, not appreciating half of his stuff being dropped in the bus. Yang had bitten her glove as hard as she could hoping that it could feel the pain.

"Ehehe. Sorry pal." She tried to play it off as nothing too bad. "Guess I'm just itchin' to get my work done."

With a sigh, Jaune relented in giving his homework for her to compare and copy. Blake was nice enough to help out in putting his stuff in his bag while he picked up the things on the floor. As he looked up, he saw Blake with her whole head stuffed in his bag.

"Are you two feeling okay?" The blonde asked, taking his bag off Blake's head. Instead of answering him, Blake had forced herself to laugh and pull on her ribbon as hard as she could.

"Never better." The dark haired teen said through gritted teeth, stretching her ribbon extra hard. "Just feeling nerves and all."

The bus ride to school was extremely awkward for the two teens. Ruby and Weiss were glad they weren't sitting close by.

At school â€“ Girl's bathroom

Lunch Time

Things had not been going well with the four at all. After getting off the bus, the four have accidentally assaulted one of their only guy friends.

Weiss's hair tie, which she named Ein, had kept pulling on her towards Jaune until she all but tackled him in the back head-first. Ruby had all but tackled him into his locker thanks to Crimson, who was pulling her towards him just as he was putting his lunch in said locker.

Blake had all but embarrassed Jaune and herself when her bow had tried to drag her head into Jaune's bag once more. It didn't help that Jaune had had his bag on his lap during class and the bow had dragged her at the moment when he was moving to placing it on the floor. So Blake had not only headbutted her friend's groin, she also had her face too close to said groin.

And during a shifting of classes while the three classmates were heading out, Clip and Duster had gotten grabby and had tried to get to Jaune's backpack. To onlookers, it would have been Yang giving Jaune a hug, but to Jaune himself, Yang was holding him in a very tight bear hug that was popping his ribs and spine.

"What is up with you guys today?" Ruby scolded the symbiotes. All cloths were on the sink as their owners were glaring daggers at them. "Not only have you just embarrassed us in front of the whole school, a good friend of ours kept getting hurt."

"We cant help it." Clip whined childishly.

"The fairy's hiding in the blonde guy's bag." Duster explained. "All we wanna do is eat it, but it wont keep still. It's mean!"

"You guys found a fairy?" Weiss squealed in excitement. The three had ignored that when they figured out why their clothes were acting up.

"Again with the fairy!" Yang exclaimed angrily. "You know what? You two are grounded! No eating Grimm for a week."

"You cant do that!" Duster tried being defiant. That had caused Yang to raise it to two weeks.

"That's not fair!" Clip cried, flopping on it's sibling.

"Well then learn to behave!" Yang said, lowering herself to her gloves level. "No more chasing the fairy. I don't care if it makes you powerful. You guys are all in a heap of trouble as it is."

"Sorry Ma Yang." Her gloves apologized.

"Crimson?" Ruby looked at her ribbon with arms folded expectantly.

"What?" It was determined to eat a fairy and it wouldn't cave in likes it's offsprings. "It's not like you can ground me. We need to stop Grimm or else they cause destruction."

"Fast-food drive-by." She said, putting down her threat. "Just to hangout there and I'm not washing you for a week as we go through there."

"Power-up or smellyness." This was a tough choice for the ribbon.

"Can you live being powerful but smelling like grease and oils for the rest of your life?" Ruby said, giving Crimson a scary look. "I don't think I can wear you after a few days of that smell wafting over."

"â€¦Fine!" It caved. "I promise not to chase the fairy. â€¦But if by some miracle it decided it wanted me to eat it, then I'm doing it!"

After the other two got a tug of confirmation from their clothes, they had left the bathroom to apologize to their friend.

Cafeteria

"Hey Jaune!" Said boy had jumped out of his seat when Ruby had greeted him. "â€¦Okay, I kind of deserved that."

"Chill bud." Yang said, sitting him down and joining him. "What happened today was â€¦a weird set if circumstances."

"So the bear hug and the headbutts?" He asked.

"Some of those were accidents." Ruby pointed to her, Weiss, and Blake.

"And I was just really happy you shared your homework." Yang fibbed. Technically she was happy about the homework sharing, but not happy enough to hug him that tight. "Sorry I got too carried away. We cool?"

"â€¦We're cool." As Jaune had reached into his bag to pull out his lunch, he instead pulled out an apple with a fairy hanging onto it. "What the-"

He never got to finish his sentence as the fairy had jumped into his mouth to hide after it saw the four girls. As he tried to get spit it out, the fairy was hell bent on staying in him. The four had immediately taken action, picking him up and dragging him out of the cafeteria.

"Nothing to see here everyone!" Yang shouted as students and teachers watched the three carry him out. "Just a friend having an allergic reaction. Bringing him to the nurse's office. Go back to eating."

Shrugging at that, the students did just that, unaware that the four were dragging the boy somewhere else.

In an empty classroom

"Plagh!" Jaune spat the fairy into his hands. As the four surrounded it, they could see it was disheveled with a huge blush on it's pale body.

_"__I've never felt so violated but pleasured in my entire life."_ It gasped, fixing it's hair with a goofy smile. The four had gave the only male in the room a dirty glare.

"â€¦What?" He said affronted. "How was I supposed to know what I was doing? â€¦Besides, is this a fairy?"

_"__Yes I am." _She said, flying to rest on his head and staring the girls staring at her with stars in their eyes. _"And I notice you girls have stopped chasing me."_

"You are just so cute!" Weiss gushed, standing on her toes to get a better look at her. "I just wanna dress you up so badly."

_"__And all I wanna do is go home!" _The fairy shouted before turning to Ruby with hope in her eyes. _"So if you could just open up so I could leave? Please?"_

"I'm really sorry." Ruby apologized. "But I cant do that."

_"__Why not?" _The group couldn't help but feel sorry hearing her sad tone. _"I don't want to be here. I wanna go back to my home."_

"Because it's a one way ticket, deary." Crimson told her. She immediately flew back to Jaune's head to get away from it. "Relax. I'm over the whole trying to eat you thing."

"Did your ribbon just talk?" Jaune asked the youngest girl.

"We'll fill you in later." Weiss waved him off. "Right now we need to figure out what to do with her."

_"__I cant go back home?" _The tiny creature said, tears leaking out of her eyes. _"I'm stuck here forever?"_

Getting off Jaune's head, she flew to sit on one of the whiteboard erasers. Getting a nudge from his fellow blonde, Jaune saw her motioning for him to talk to the sad creature. After pointing for one of them to do it instead, each of them looked away while pointing at their respective symbiote. Getting what they meant, he went to talk to her.

_"__What do you want?" _The fairy asked in a huff, not turning around to look at him. _"Cant you see I'm having a bad day?"_

"I know what that's like." He tried to sympathize with her. Reaching into his pocket, he grabbed a handkerchief for her to wipe her tears. "I've been having a bad day too."

The girls had looked to their symbiotes at what he said. If they did have faces, then they would be staring down in shame and guilt.

_"__Nice guys like you don't deserve bad days."_ She said accepting the cloth and wiping her face. After a few minutes of debating with himself, Jaune sighed of what he was about to do.

"So you're not without a home." He started. "And you don't want to live with any of my friends from what I've picked up. â€¦So maybe I can have you live with me. It might beat wandering the city streets alone and scared. â€¦It's your choice."

_"__Really?" _Jaune was now having his face nuzzled by an extremely happy fairy as it had hugged his cheek tightly. _"Thankyouthankyouthankyouâ€¦!"_

"So do you have a name I can call you?" The girls were now leaning forward, wondering themselves what her name was.

_"__I'm Krocheya Moros."_ She introduced herself.

"All's well that ends well!" Yang said, getting in between the two. Krocheya had quickly zoomed to Jaune's head when Clip tried to greet her. "Nice to have you on the team Krocheya."

"I still don't really get what's going on." Jaune told the group.

Afterschool â€“ Yang and Ruby's apartment

After rushing in, Ruby and Yang had explained the whole thing to their neighbour. Weiss and Blake had added in a few points of their own when they felt something was left out. After processing all the info, he had accepted it being aware of all the freaky things that had happened.

"It's amazing how good you guys were keeping this a secret." Jaune commented in their living Ruby while holding a cookie for Krocheya to eat. "Are you enjoying yourself, Krocheya?"

_"__I'm discovering new pleasures in life I've never felt before."_ She said happily munching on the chocolate part of the cookie. The group had blushed at her comment.

"Yeesh Ladykiller." Yang said, looking down at the fairy. "Just what did you do to her when she was in your mouth?"

"Let's not talk about it." Weiss said with an extremely red face. Looking over to Blake, she saw that she was shuddering. Whether it was in disgust or pleasure she didn't want to know.

"So you girls can combine with these symbiote things to become like magical girls." He said to himself before looking down to his new roommate. "Does this mean me and her can do the same thing?"

"Nope/_Doesn't work like that._" The ribbon and fairy said at the same time. Seeing as it was her powers, Crimson let Krocheya explain.

_"__My powers work like enchantments." _She started. _"Think of it like giving you gifts that would make you more powerful than you are now."_

"So they're like blessings." Weiss summed it up.

_"__Exactly!" _She nodded in approval. _"It can range from enchanting you to have the same powers as me, to giving you a weapon so powerful that nothing could stop you."_

"Those powers." Jaune gulped. "There aren't any drawbacks are there? Like I'd turn into a fairy forever or some kind of monster?"

_"__I wouldn't know." _She shrugged, sitting on Jaune's hand. _"I've never blessed anyone since I'm still a newborn."_

"Aww dangit!" The symbiotes groaned with Crimson being the loudest. "I thought you were an aged fairy. Eating you wouldn't even raise our power level to kill a dragon Grimm. Useless!"

_"__HEY!" _She squawked at the insult. _"I'll have you know I'm still capable of killing dragons and dark beings."_

"But if you've never blessed anyone then your magic is weaker than my newborns." It retorted back. The group could tell those two wouldn't be getting along anytime soon.

After getting control of the two, Weiss had left after an hour with Jaune and Krocheya leaving a few minutes after. It was easy to bring Krocheya into his home since she could hide in his bag until he got into his room. Somehow, Ruby had a feeling Jaune and his new partner would be a huge help to her in the near future.

>AN: Yes. Jaune is now holding a fairy. Remind you guys of anyone? A blonde that uses a shield and sword? Someone who get's strong from the blessings of a powerful being?

That's right! Sophitia from Soul Caliber.

Just kidding. We all know it's *Zelda Link. Now if you think Jaune has the most OP'ed partner, it's not even over yet. And remember, he cant combine or do any of those things a symbiote and host can do. All the power depends on Krocheya if she's willing to give or not.

>Chapter 6: Hearts and Blessings

It had been a week since Jaune had found out about the four girl's powers. After Krocheya, nothing had popped out of Ruby that she couldn't handle on her own. Blake had finally made contact with her bow, which named itself Gaol. Weiss on the other hand was still not having luck with Ein.

Ruby felt that she had been having a chain of good days. But just like there are good days, there are bad ones too.

"Uuhuuâ€¦" Ruby cried through her red puffy eyes as she lay in bed in her pajamas.

"This is what happens when you fight a Nevermore during the monsoon seasons." Yang scolded her baby sister as she finished wiping her down. "You'd think with a symbiote that covers most of you, it'd help combat a simple cold."

"Hey, bite me!" Crimson said while wrapped around it's host head like a cold compress. "I'm a piece of clothing that grants ultimate power, not an immune system."

"With ultimate powers, immunities should be part of it." The blonde sibling ground out. "How can you call yourself all powerful if you can still get sick?"

"You're human mind just doesn't understand the importance of such things." The cloak lectured. "Pain and such may seem like a weakness, but it-"

"Blah, blah, blah. None of that! â€¦So rest up sis." She patted her little sister's head before walking to the door. "You gotta get better since tomorrow is a school day."

All Ruby could muster was a shaky thumbs up before her sister turned out the lights and shut the door.

The next day â€“ On the way to school

"I can't believe you got sick." Jaune said to his three neighbors as they walked to the bus stop in the rain. He and Blake were currently sharing an umbrella while Yang was walking with her sister. "You'd think with something that gives you superpowers, you'd have high immunity."

Ruby was fine to go to school. The only thing she had was the sniffles and a clogged nose.

"That's what I said!" Her fellow blonde nodded. Ruby shook her head at the two. "But the cloak is all 'you wouldn't understand. You're mind can't comprehend.'"

"By the way." Jaune said, turning to his partner in his bag. "Can you do any of that?"

_"__Not in my jurisdiction." _Krocheya explained from inside. _"There are different classes of fairies. Mostly there are nature, elementals, and rural. Some have mixed breeds, so there have been debates on what class to put them under."_

"So what class do you fall under?" The bow wearer asked. She and Krocheya had gotten along well since both loved to read books together.

_"__I'm sort of a mix breed." _She answered with small pride. _"To be more specific, I'm a child of a book fairy and a water sprite. I can't give immunities, but I can give basic healing, knowledge, and skills."_

"Boo!" Said Yang's left glove.

"Boring!" Said the other. The group had gotten used to the two's antics. They were still newborns, so their childish attitude was something they'd have to bear with. "Where's the fun stuff like turning dragons into dust or all the fun explosions?"

_"__You childish brutes wouldn't understand the depths of what a blessing from a fairy could hold!" _The offended fairy huffed. _"Blessings from a fairy of any kind are powerful and bring more joy than you're greedy symbiotic natures!"_

"Hey!" Clip shouted, turning into a fist against Yang's will. "Them's fighting words!"

"You lookin' fer a tussle missy?" Duster said with an accent. Yang had kicked herself mentally for watching old late night shows with them on. "We'll be havin' you screamin' like a piggy."

"Say yer sorry n maybe we can fogetabatit." Clip finished.

Krocheya, Blake, and Ruby were happy to be on the bus where the two gloves could keep quiet.

On the bus

"You'd think having ultimate power would mean having a stronger immunity." Weiss said in a seat behind the two blondes.

"Our thoughts exactly." The blonde male said, doing the usual routine of comparing work Yang.

"Why do all my friends think the same things against me?" Ruby asked herself. Crimson had transformed itself to be a surgical mask in case anything in Ruby's nose came out a symbiote. If it was a Grimm, then it'd give an early warning for her to go somewhere secluded.

Lunchtime

Classes had been normal for all of them surprisingly. Crimson hadn't alerted Ruby of anything wrong, and her sniffles had died down into a few snorts and drips.

"So Jauneâ€¦" Yang said in a very sweet tone, saddling up to her fellow blonde. "Been meaning to ask this for a while nowâ€¦"

Blake, Weiss, and Ruby had stopped eating to see what Yang would be asking him. For a while, Weiss had gotten it into her head that Yang had feelings for Jaune and was now taking the time to ask him out.

Blake was wondering what their relationship was like since she first met them. The way Yang defended him when Adam punched him and the story form Tifania of how the two were walking home together when they brought her to his apartment gave her an inkling feeling that something was there.

For Ruby, she was having mixed feelings of whether she shipped it or not.

"How's it like living with a fairy?" She said with stars in her eyes. The three girls had saddled up to him to hear his answer. "Is it like how it is in most stories? She gives you shiny things and sparkles and all that sweet stuff?"

"Things are pretty normal." He said, putting his sandwich down. "She's still a woman, so some boundaries are put up. As for the blessings partâ€¦ I haven't asked for anything yet."

"But you could have anything." Weiss whined at the unfairness. "Money, love, anything your heart desires! You could have anything."

_"__Not really." _The fairy said from inside Jaune's lunchbag. _"My powers have limits too, you know."_

"But the whole love and money thing is there, right?" Weiss asked.

_"__Yes, I can give love, money, and eternal life." _She said in a bored tone. _"And I offered him those things and he refused them all!"_

"Why?" Weiss cried at the wasted opportunity.

"It'd be boring if everything you ever wanted just falls into your lap." He explained himself. "â€¦At least you guys get to transform with superpowers."

_"â€¦__Is that what you wanted?" _Krocheya asked in excitement. _"I could give you that stuff!"_

"Still haven't." Weiss mumbled with her head on the table.

"I've just been able to talk to mine recently." Now she was staring at Blake with envy since Ein hasn't even bothered trying to talk to her.

"Hold on!" Yang butted in. "Fairies can give superpowers?"

_"__Of course we can!" _She nodded with a proud smirk. _"In the old days when humans could enter our realm, we gave them powers. â€¦Then they all forgot about us and went to wizards and saints for a cheap knock-off item like swords and such. â€¦Don't know what happened after that though."_

"Then I'll take those powers then." Jaune said in excitement. "It'd be great to help you guys out."

_"__Perfect!" _The fairy gave a thumbs up. _"We'll just head off to a meadow area or a grassy plain where I can bless you properly. It's usually for tradition's sake, but it also comes with greater perks than just doing things on the spot."_

Suddenly, Crimson felt a disturbance in Ruby. A portal had opened up and something big was coming out. "Ruby."

"What is it Crimson?" She asked, sniffing a snot that was dangling on her nose. "I'm feeling fine, so I don't think anything is popping out soon."

"You're wrong." It said in a grave tone. "Something is coming. And it's big."

"Guys." She nudged her sister to get their attention. "We might wanna get out of here. â€¦Something is going to pop out."

Nodding their heads, the group had picked up their bags to run somewhere secluded.

School Gym

The group had quickly made it to the gym area and had found it empty since the rain outside made the whole area humid and moist. Weiss had stayed outside since she still couldn't combine or talk with Ein.

"Let's get this over with quick." Yang grumbled, tying her hair in a ponytail in her transformed state. "All this humidity is frizzing my hair."

_"__Don't worry Jaune." _The fairy told her partner as he held a metal bat. _"With me here, I can act as a shield while you help fight whatever comes out. It could be another Ursa or an Alpha Beowulf, so this should be simple."_

"We're ready Ruby." Blake said, forming a connection with Gaol.

"This will be our first fusion together." Gaol whispered into Blake's ear. "Remember to think of something we can use as a weapon."

"Got it." Blake said as her eyes became more catlike and her bow turned into cat ears.

As Crimson wrapped itself around Ruby in cloak form, the group saw something similar snake's tongues popping out of her nostrils. What made it grosser was that they were still flicking about.

"Eew!" Yang said in disgust seeing what was on her sister's face.

"Here we go." Ruby said uncertain as she blew her nose. What came out was a two-headed snake that was connected together. It had dwarfed all of them in size as it shook its heads to get it's bearings.

_"__A King Taijitu?" _Krocheya had run out the gym the moment that it appeared.

"Krocheya!" Jaune had ran after his partner, leaving Yang, Blake, and Ruby to fight it on it's own.

With Weiss

"Why wont you talk to me?" Weiss asked her tie in her hand. "I want to help the others. Don't you feel the same?"

She was taken out of her thoughts as she saw Jaune's fairy bolt out of the gym with him chasing after her.

"Jaune?" She called, running to catch up to him. "Why's Krocheya running off?"

"I don't know." He said not taking his eyes off her as she flew into the rain and stopping in the track and field. Because of all the rain, the caretakers weren't able to cut the grass for days. "But I'm going to find out."

As they got near her, they saw she was shivering in fear and hugging herself.

"Krocheya." Jaune called out to her softly. "We need to go back and help them."

_"__I cant fight that thing Jaune." _She said, looking at him with fear in her eyes. _"If I get even a scratch on me from it's fangs, I'll die. Fairies and poison don't mix well. Please don't send me back there."_

"I'm sorry Krocheya." He said, scooping her up. "I didn't know."

"â€¦Krocheya." Weiss said, ignoring the rain drenching her. "You said to bless Jaune, you'd need a grassy plain. Will this place do?"

"After the blessing, you can wait out the gym while I go in and help them." Jaune offered his partner. "No one will fault you for running and hiding in this situation."

_"__Thank you guys." _She said wiping her tears and floating up to be at Jaune's eye level.

Placing her hands on his forehead, she looked him in the eyes and took a breath.

_"__Get ready, Jaune_._ This will be overwhelming for the both of us." _She told him with a fierce look. _"For it is in passing that we achieve immortalityâ€¦"_

As Weiss watched the two, she looked down at her own partner.

"Please." She whispered to it. "If you don't want to fuse, at least talk to me. â€¦Let me know you're there."

When no answer came, she grew impatient. "Answer me you stupid tie!"

"â€¦Finally." She heard it laugh. "I was waiting for that side of you to show."

As Krocheya continued to give Jaune his gift, Weiss and her partner were now having a heart to heart.

With Ruby and co

"This is the hardest thing I've ever fought so far!" Ruby said as she ducked the black head of the snake.

"It doesn't even have any blind spots!" Yang said, jumping over the white one's head. "These two are just too good!"

"I think it's technically one." Blake said, dislodging from the middle after failing to cut it in half. Her katana and chain weren't helpful since the snakes had kept slithering out of the binds.

"This isn't ending well!" Ruby said, as the three were now in the center where the two heads were now circling them like vultures. "Anyone see a way out of this?"

"None." Both girls answered, lowering their weapons in despair. Ruby could feel herself shaking and getting misty eyed as she felt like this was her end.

"Where's this mist coming from?" Blake said, looking around seeing the whole gym being covered in a mist. Ruby blinked as she saw that what Blake had said was true. "And why does it smell so sweet?"

"Do you guys feel a little shaky?" Yang asked.

As the girls looked down, they saw a glowing circle surrounding them. Before they could brace themselves, they were propelled into the air and out of the center of the two snakeheads.

"We're alive!" Ruby said, falling to her knees.

Looking to the Taijitu, they were astounded to see a huge mist covering it as circles of light had kept appearing in random places with a blur passing through the beast. As the mist cleared, they saw a streak of white hair before a new blur took it's place and started dealing it's own damage.

"Switch!" Came a familiar voice as it skidded to a halt beside them.

The person who was next to them was Weiss, only she was a lot paler than how she usually was and glowing while wearing a skirt similar to a snowflake and her hair tie was in the fashion of a snow crown. In her hands was a rapier that looked extremely sharp.

"Weiss?" Ruby said, looking at her in awe.

"I hope you don't mind that we took the spotlight for a bit." She said, giving them a bright smile.

"So that meansâ€¦" Looking to the Taijitu, they saw a new mist covering it. For some odd reason the snake couldn't get past the mist like it was locked in it.

"Show off." Weiss muttered with a smirk seeing fire and lightning pop out a few times, before turning to Blake. "Wanna help get rid of this thing?"

Nodding her head, Blake and Gaol had readied themselves. From the sounds of things, the Taijitu was getting weak and tired.

As the mist started to dissipate, Jaune had jumped out to land next to Weiss before she and Blake jumped in themselves. Yang had took note of the long pointy ears and the opal eyes.

Summoning a glyph, Weiss propelled the two of them head first into the center of the Grimm.

"Bon appÃ©tit, Ein!" She shouted targeting the white head.

"Bottoms up, Gaol!" Blake smirked as Gaol had elongated itself to form a jungle cat's head.

As Gaol ate the snakehead, Blake turned to see Weiss having Ein freeze the other and shatter it into pieces before sucking it up like a vacuum.

Ruby's apartment â€“After school

After that was all done, Ruby and co had gone entered their class extremely late and tired. They had all gotten off lightly with a scolding, but were able to head home without any detention. As they reached her apartment, Ruby had instantly sat the two down to talk about their transformations.

"You guys were incredible!" She said with stars in her eyes, while looking them over. "At first, we were like 'We can take it.' But then we were all like 'Oh no! We're done for.' Then you guys showed up and were like fwaaaaa, hyaaaa, waaaaaaah."

The two giggled at her rendition of their battle.

"I'm still awestruck at how awesome your transformations look." Yang told the two. "You too Blake. It's like all three of you got the better end of the style department."

"We did spend a lot more time with our symbiotes." Blake said, scratching Gaol affectionately to it's delight. "And like Crimson had explained before: We're also very compatible with one another."

"But we're compatible too." Duster said on Yang's hand. "Ma Yang is love, Ma Yang is life!"

"Aww." Yang cooed, patting Duster with Clip. "I love you guys too."

"Give it time, Yang." Crimson started. "Soon, your transformation and ours will have changes."

"Like when you absorbed Adam's gun and ate all those Nevermore?" Ruby asked, still liking the perks her scythe kept getting. It could now shoot fireworks at a high velocity and fly like a witch's broom. "â€¦If we ate enough King Taijitu, would Crescent Rose get dual blades?"

"Like I said, Ruby." Her cloak said, wrapping itself around her tighter. "Give it time. If I manage to give birth without my offsprings running off like the last two, then you may start gaining more power."

"Viva la revolution you ole coot!" Duster taunted it's parent.

"You're not the boss of us." Clip supported it's twin.

_"__Pfft. Symbiotes." _Krocheya scoffed, floating above them. _"Even their children are rude, obnoxious, and disrespectful."_

"Why don't you buzz off you naked coward?" The group had blushed at Crimson's words. "Go hide in another hole while everyone else fights."

_"__Well at least I do have a body you flat, undesirable, filthy rag!" _The owners had separated from their partners as the impending argument had risen.

As the parent, children, and fairy bickered amongst themselves, Ruby and Yang had asked the three to transform one more time before Jaune and Weiss had to go to their respective homes.

Nodding at the request, the two sisters had a fun time looking them over from Jaune's opal eyes, to Blake's cat ears, down to Weiss's snowflake skirt and crown. This had given the siblings an idea of how they want their next transformation to look like.

Elsewhere

"That's going to be a problem." A guy in a wheelchair said, rewinding the video he recorded on his phone. "I can't believe those five didn't notice someone was filming them the whole time."

"Don't worry." A female voice said behind him. "Give it a few more weeks and we'll have power far greater than what we're seeing now. We're the descendants after all. It's our birth right."

"And what?" The teen asked with a raised brow.

"We think you have a problem?" Ruby said slowly to not offend their friend.

"What do you mean?" She said feeling insulted. "Is it about the whole folding the toilet tissues in triangles? There's nothing wrong with that."

"That's not it." Ruby shook her head.

"It's about me drinking from straight from the milk carton, isn't it?" She said, sure of herself.

"You've been what?" Yang said, not liking the new info she had to file away for later. "No! We're talking about your violin problem!"

After getting her part-time job, one of her co-workers who was falling on hard times had a garage sale where Blake got a used electric violin in good condition for a bargained price of one hundred fifty Lien. Her roommates were happy for her and were relieved that she was courteous enough to ask whether her playing would be disturbing them before she did play.

"I don't see any problem." Blake said, crossing her hands. "No one has been complaining about the noise."

"Your problem is that you're taking your violin everywhere you go in the apartment." Yang argued. "I know I saw you take it with you into the bathroom."

"The acoustics are nice in there." Blake defended her reason.

"You have it right there on your lap." Ruby said, pointing to the violin sitting on her lap.

"If we got another chair, I'd just put it on there." She said with a pout.

It was only after the air got humid in the apartment and her violin started getting mold on it that Blake had started leaving it in it's case.
